

SPACE WALK 'GREAT'

Have A Merry Christmas And . . . COLOR
A Christmas Tree1st of a Series
By BERNICE REIDA and ANN IRWIN

How Mother used to complain about the needles on the front parlor rug, but by the next Christmas she would have forgotten, and our persistent pleas of "When are we going to put up the tree?" would eventually wear her down.

Finally that special Saturday would come when we'd hurry through our chores and trudge down to the grove to find our Christmas tree. Cutting the whole tree down was unthinkable, just a branch from the biggest pine and from the thickest clump. It wasn't ecology then; only a rural respect for growing things.

Had Mother known the Christmas tree was, in reality, a pagan custom, we would probably never had a Christmas tree in the front parlor — needles or no.

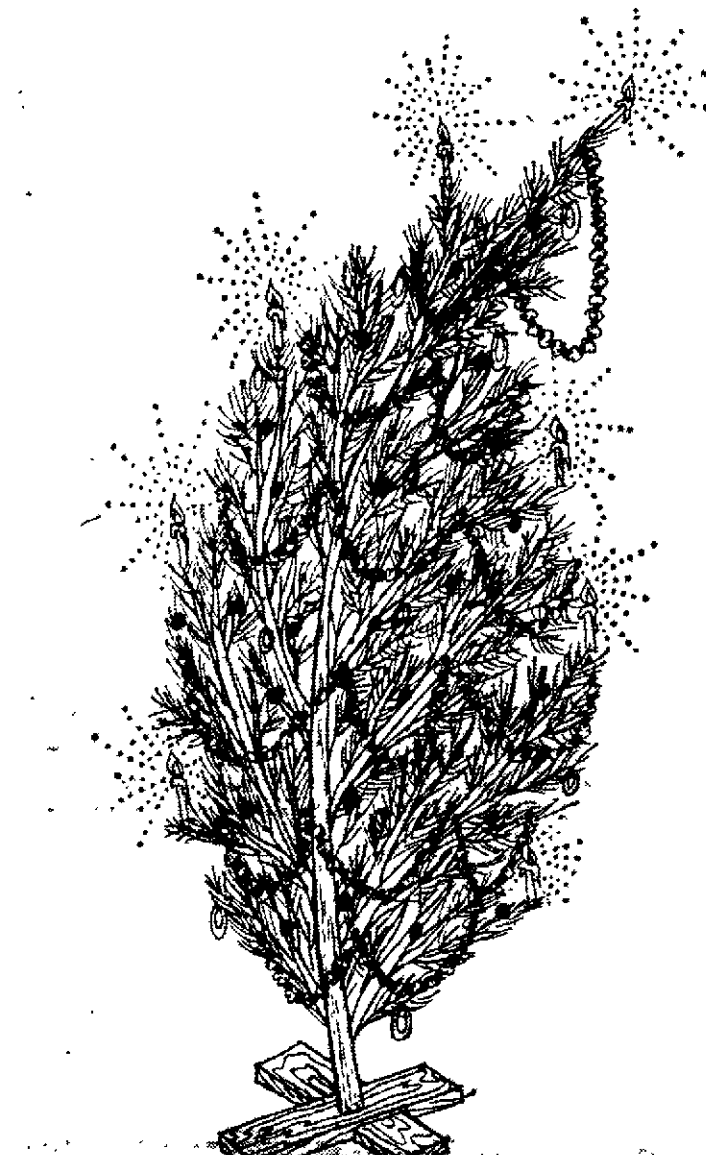

The ancient Druids had this thing about trees. Around the winter solstice, they lugged trees into their caves to welcome the Sun God back for the spring season. These early northern tribes thought the sun was a wheel that alternately threw its light upon the earth and away from it. On December 21 they would pay their reverence to the Sun-Wheel or Sun-Yule by bringing in the tree and dancing and feasting up an orgy. No, Mother would never have approved.

When Pope Julius I, of the 4th century, set up a commission to fix once and for all the exact date for the celebration of the birthday of the Christ Child, the chairman of the board wisely chose a date that would coincide with these winter celebrations of the solstice. Naturally some of the customs from these festivities crept into the Christian festival. The Christmas tree was one of them.

As we painstakingly cut and patted and threaded and tied the popcorn, cranberries, and homemade baubles to decorate our tree, Mother would tell us the Christian legends of the Baby's birth.

"When the tiny Babe was born, the trees in the forests burst forth into blossoms and bore fruit," she would relate, "and that is why we decorate our Christmas tree today."

Father would raise his eyes in a disbelieving glance, and she would hastily add, "Well, it's a lovely thought, anyway."

Maybe that's just what legends are: lovely thoughts to explain the mysteries of life.

Although Mother was "full-blooded Welsh and blessedly proud of it," she reluctantly admitted that the Germans did deserve the credit for the Christmas tree idea, a great concession for Mother. When Prince Albert, the German husband of Queen Victoria, set up a brilliantly decorated tree in Windsor Castle one Christmas Eve, the custom caught on fast in England. By 1851, the first mass shipment of Christmas trees was sold on the streets of New York City by an enterprising upstate farmer.

From the primitive Druid chanting his wild songs at Stonehenge to the Christian singing his carols around the modern electric extravaganza — whether it be live, plastic, or aluminum — how wonderful to be a child with a Christmas tree! Even for adults, the Christmas tree retains some of its original symbolism, man's infinite hope for a new spring of life and peace.

Film Canisters Are Retrieved

... Evans Enjoys Trek

Space Center, Houston (AP) — Astronaut Ronald E. Evans, almost forgotten while his companions explored the moon for three days, had his moment in the sun as he took a deep space walk Sunday, floating like a feather 180,000 miles from earth.

"Speaking of being a spaceman, this is it," Evans said as he slipped through the hatch of homeward-bound Apollo 17 and worked his way to the rear of the craft to retrieve three canisters of film containing valuable records of the moon.

Television pictures relayed to Mission Control showed him enjoying the jaunt immensely. He cavorted effortlessly in the eerie void of space for 44 minutes, intrigued by the breathtaking vista of stars, sun, moon, earth and sky.

25-Foot Lifeline

He was bundled in a stiff white pressure suit and attached to a 25-foot lifeline.

"Hot diggity dog. Wow!" he commented, as his moon-walking companions, Eugene A. Cernan and Harrison H. Schmitt monitored his progress from command ship America's cabin.

With the hatch open, the cabin was exposed to the harsh vacuum of space. Cernan and Schmitt also wore protective suits.

Tuesday Splashdown

The spaceship, last in the Apollo series, was streaking toward a Tuesday splashdown in the Pacific Ocean, right on course, when Evans began man's third deep space walk, a feat also accomplished on Apollos 15 and 16.

"Hey there's the earth right out the hatch!" he exclaimed as he edged outside. "Beautiful. Hey, that sun is bright. That's a beautiful moon down there. A full moon."

"When you get out there take it nice and slow and easy. You've got all day," commander Cernan cautioned. "You're a long way from home. We don't want to lose you."

Three Round Trips

Evans, who had exercised for months to condition himself for the task, worked his way hand over hand on a 15-foot rail to the camera bay at the rear of the spacecraft to pick up three canisters. It required three round trips.

Two of the canisters contained nearly two miles of film snapped by a pair of moon-mapping cameras. The other was a package of special film which recorded results of an experiment called a lunar sounder. The sounder fired radar signals into the surface while Evans orbited the moon alone and took X-ray-like pictures of the underlying terrain.

He told Mission Control the side of the spacecraft "is scorched like a son of a gun" as a result of jet thruster firings.

Family Greeting

And before returning to the cabin he waved at the camera and sent regards to his family. "Hi, Jan, Hi, Jaime, Hi, Jon," he said.

At home in Houston, Janet Evans watched her husband on TV and said: "Hey, honey, don't fall."

The space walk is necessary because the camera bay is jettisoned before re-entry and does not return to earth with the astronauts.

Course Is Perfect

The command ship, America, meanwhile, was racing towards earth on such a perfect course that Mission Control told the astronauts to skip a planned course correction Sunday morning.

They were right on target toward a splashdown Tuesday in the South Pacific some 400 miles southeast of Samoa. The weather forecast from the recovery carrier Ticonderoga was for good conditions in the landing zone — partly cloudy with scattered showers, three-foot seas and 80-degree temperatures.

Looking ahead to the landing, Mission Control awakened the spacemen Sunday with a vocal recording of "Home for the Holidays."

Proposed County-City Building Directory Said 'Puzzling'By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Unless some major revisions are made in the proposed listings for the County-City Building Directory, some city and county officials feel that the new directory and signs will be little improvement over the existing system.

After considerable criticism of the numbering system for county and city offices and the difficulty the public has in finding offices, the County-City Building Committee gave a Kansas City firm the go-ahead on a study of the traffic in the building and setting up a signing system and providing signs at a total cost not to exceed $5,000.

Officials have been provided by the firm a proposed list of directory listings of services and offices in the building which includes such puzzling items as county attorney's office and safety and public property under the heading of "Census Information."

However, census information in the proposal does not include a reference to the county superintendent of schools office which does have census information.

In the corrections on the proposals being prepared by department heads, Dr. Glenn Turner, superintendent, noted that this listing should include Supt. of Schools since that office provides this information for social security and occasionally for delayed birth certificates.

Officials indicated they didn't understand the proposals and how the individuals who allegedly spent 65 man hours working on it

CHRISTMAS LIGHTS . . . turned on by Gov. Exon and two helpers.

Exon Says The Spirit Of Christmas Can Overcome Violence, Destruction

There are "powers beyond us that will cause Christmas trees" — and the spirit behind them — "to grow no matter what violence and destruction sweeps across our world," Gov. J. James Exon said Sunday afternoon in his state message at the 25th annual Christmas Carol Sing.

The giant rotunda of the State Capitol Building filled, rang and echoed with strains of traditional Christmas carols when the Lincoln Boys' Choir and more than 600 in the audience celebrated the lighting of the State Christmas Tree.

The message of Christmas," Exon said, is that "we have a responsibility to be tree planters" in the sense that the Christmas tree stands only as "a material thing to renew our spiritual faith."

In telling a parable of death and rebirth, the governor recalled the 1965 fire that destroyed more than two million trees in western Nebraska's Halsey National Forest. He told of the power of nature to rejuvenate itself, how small evergreens now grow from the heated seeds that sparked where fire blackened the forest.

"Unknown to us, the seeds of hope are buried just beneath the surface" in the human heart, Exon said, and he likened the rise of goodwill to the growth of the saplings that grew from despair.

The parable, he said, illustrates "our spiritual life and rebirth which seems to come to us so well at Christmas time."

Two children from the audience helped the governor officially light the giant 25-foot state tree. Exon said, "Children above all else are what Christmas means to us."

The Carol Sing around the state tree began 25 years ago, when Mrs. Doris Pierce and Ken Greenwood initiated the festivity. Mrs. Pierce was on hand Sunday, serving yet as its chairman.

The sing, attended by what Exon called "one of the largest crowds we've ever had," was presented by the Lincoln Civic Singfest Committee, the Lincoln Jaycees and Mrs. Jaycees, the Lincoln Recreation Department and radio station KFOR.

Truman's Kidneys Weaken

Kansas City (AP) — Doctors expressed new concern Sunday over the weakening of Harry S. Truman's kidneys but appeared ready to rule out use of an artificial kidney machine because of the strain it might place on his already overburdened heart.

The 88-year-old former president remained in "very serious" condition and was unable to speak, but the hospital reported that although he continued to be semiconscious, he appeared to be aware of persons around him.

Research Hospital and Medical Center reported at an afternoon briefing that there had been no improvement in Truman's kidney output.

A kidney specialist examined him Sunday and the hospital said a final decision was postponed about use of a machine to aid his failing kidneys purify his blood and eliminate body wastes.

It was the impression of the specialist, however, that Truman's weakened heart would prohibit use of a machine, the hospital said.

Sunday night, a hospital spokesman clarified an earlier statement, attributed to the doctors, which said Truman could "go on for weeks without any kidney function at all."

The spokesman said, "A more accurate statement would be that he could go on a week or more."

He added that at 8 p.m. CST Truman's condition was unchanged.

Bess Truman, 87, and Margaret Truman Daniel again visited the former president several hours Sunday.

Mary Jane Truman, who is being treated at Research Hospital for injuries she suffered in a fall, also visited her brother. Truman made no visible response to the visitors.

News Summary

Haig To Brief Indochina Leaders On Impasse

(c) New York Times News Service

Washington — The White House announced Sunday that Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., Henry A. Kissinger's deputy, was flying to Southeast Asia to brief the leaders of South Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia, and Thailand on the current impasse in the Paris cease-fire talks. Haig's trip is expected to last only a few days. He is scheduled to arrive in Saigon Monday, and to return to Washington on Thursday. (More on Page 2.)

Nixon Considering Measures

Washington — President Nixon is considering a number of measures, including possible military actions, to persuade North Vietnam to reach an early cease-fire agreement, according to well-placed administration officials.

who described Nixon as very angry over Hanoi's sudden tougher negotiating position. Other steps under consideration include private diplomatic representations to the Soviet Union, China and other nations to try to use their influence to get the cease-fire talks "back on track."

Senators Disappointed

Washington — The negative turn in the Paris cease-fire negotiations provoked a general reaction of disappointment among senators in Washington, but it is still not clear whether the disappointment would lead to renewed criticism of the administration's Vietnam policies. For the moment, the administration appeared to have kept the issue under political control through Kissinger's public explanation

Saturday of how the secret talks had reached an impasse.

The Devil Under Attack

Rome — A two-page special section on the devil in Sunday's issue of the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano was interpreted as a reflection of Pope Paul VI's deepening concern over demonic aspects in the present-day world. Churchmen in Rome said that the space that the newspaper had devoted to the devil also represented a counteroffensive by conservatives against liberal theologians — in the Netherlands and elsewhere — who tended to dilute traditional Roman Catholic teachings about the devil.

Population Projections Cut

Washington — The Census Bureau issued a new, strikingly low set of projections of future population in the United States, giving official credence to the probability that the nation has now entered its slowest period of population growth since the depression of the 1930's. (More on Page 7.)

Evans Walks In Space

Houston — Ronald E. Evans took a 47-minute floating walk outside the Apollo 17 spacecraft as it sped 2,200 miles an hour away from the moon toward earth. He stepped out 185,000 miles up in the vacuum of space to retrieve film at the rear of the command ship that had been exposed in lunar orbit. Apollo

17 is scheduled to land in the Pacific Ocean at 1:24 p.m. EST, Tuesday. (More on Page 25.)

Budget Controls Eyed

Washington — Radical new budget-control procedures are being developed by the members of a special new congressional committee that was established to devise ways by which Congress could assert more control over government spending. Leading committee members propose that Congress, after reviewing the President's annual budget, would adopt a rigid over-all spending ceiling each year and would bind itself not to pass any appropriations bills that exceeded the ceiling. (More on Page 25.)

Hanoi's Refusal To Accept
2 Vietnams May Be Issue

Saigon (AP) — The fundamental point blocking a peace agreement between the United States and North Vietnam appears to be Hanoi's refusal now to accept the principle of Vietnam as two separate states.

Henry A. Kissinger's Washington news conference and North Vietnamese and Viet Cong statements over the weekend on the secret negotiations give strong evidence of this.

The U.S. presidential adviser's statements also underlined three other key points:

—The withdrawal of North Vietnamese troops from South Vietnam is not an issue as far as the United States is concerned, although such a demand has been made by the government of President Nguyen Van Thieu. This issue was thought to be the major stumbling block until Kissinger dispelled it.

—What is visibly at issue is whether North Vietnam would be able to infiltrate fresh troops into the South across the demilitarized zone following a cease-fire and after the United States had withdrawn its forces and halted its air support. While the draft proposal worked out last October prohibits infiltration into South Vietnam, this would be meaningless if Hanoi failed to recognize in principle the existence of two Vietnams.

—If an agreement is reached between Washington and Hanoi that meets President Nixon's stated conditions and is considered just by the United States, Thieu will have no veto power over it. In other words, the United States would sign a bilateral agreement with North Vietnam, even if South Vietnam refused to sign.

World News

In an editorial broadcast over Radio Hanoi on Sunday, North Vietnam's official Communist party newspaper Naan Dan declared:

"The Vietnam issue is extremely clear and there is no way the Americans and their puppets can distort it. The country of Vietnam is one, the country of Vietnam is one. Nguyen Van Thieu's thesis that the Southern and Northern parts of Vietnam are two distinct states is a brutal discarding of history and of the basic provisions of the 1954 Geneva accords which recognized the independence, autonomy, unity and territorial integrity of the country of Vietnam."

"The demand by the Americans and their puppets that the demilitarized zone be reinstated and considered an international boundary is clearly a plot to turn the two parts of Vietnam into two separate countries."

North Vietnam took the position that the 1954 Geneva agreements stipulated that the military demarcation line along the 17th parallel dividing the North and South is only a provisional one and should not in any way be construed as a political or territorial boundary. It noted also that under the Geneva agreements Vietnam should have been reunified by 1956 but the South backed down on its promise to hold elections for that purpose.

Kissinger said a fundamental point remains on the agreement itself. He said the point had been accepted two weeks previously by North Vietnam and later withdrawn.

Statement Sought

While he refused to discuss the substance of this issue, he also indicated several times that the United States sought at least a statement of principle from Hanoi that it would agree to live in peace with the South, tantamount to accepting two Vietnam states.

In the first official South Vietnamese reaction, Saigon radio said in a commentary Sunday night that as a result of Kissinger's public disclosures, world opinion was "compelled" to reach a conclusion that "all hopes for a rapid resolution of the war in Indochina are considered to have vanished, unless North Vietnam changes completely its attitude."

It termed Kissinger's earlier statement that peace was at hand "only a distant vision," and declared that evidence now shows that the United States and North Vietnam are in disagreement on technical and political questions and also questions of principle.

APPOINTMENT EXPECTED

Mrs. Anne Armstrong, co-chairman of the Republican National Committee, will be named as a presidential counselor with Cabinet rank, it was announced. Outgoing GOP national chairman, Sen. Robert Dole, confirmed the expected appointment, which will leave Mrs. Armstrong as the highest-ranking woman in the second Nixon administration.

South Viets Extend Control
Near Fire Base Anne Area

Saigon (AP) — South Vietnamese paratroopers, backed by air strikes and artillery, killed 151 enemy troops in two days of fighting as they extended their control around Fire Base Anne on the northern front, the Saigon command reported Sunday.

The command said it was the largest number killed since the recapture of Quang Tri city in September. Two government paratroopers were killed and 66 wounded in the fighting around Anne, the command reported.

North Vietnam said Communist-led forces in all of Indochina would step up the fighting unless the United States stops the war in Vietnam.

Warning Level
A broadcast from the official Vietnam News Agency said the government newspaper Nhan Dan leveled the warning in an editorial supporting a statement from the Viet Cong which accused the United States of intensifying the war and making arrogant demands at the Paris peace talks.

The Nhan Dan editorial said that "if the United States persists in its war of aggression, the entire Vietnamese people will resolutely step up their fight till complete victory is won."

The newspaper called on the United States to stop using President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam "as a mouthpiece to block all avenues to peace, and sign without further delay" the peace agreement announced in October.

The U.S. Command said 36 B52s dropped more than 1,000 tons of bombs on a North Vietnamese staging area about 30 miles southwest of Pleiku in the central highlands near the Cambodian border.

"These are the most active fronts in Vietnam," reported military spokesman Lt. Col. Do Viet. "The airborne are pushing out around Fire Base Anne and there have been numerous contacts with enemy troops southwest of Pleiku as they infiltrate from across the Cambodian border."

Firefights Reported
The Saigon command also reported a series of bloody firefights with North Vietnamese troops in highland country. Nearly 50 Communist-led soldiers were killed while five government troops were killed and 13 wounded, according to the command.

Ground action elsewhere in Vietnam was reported light. The Saigon command reported 52 enemy attacks in the last 24 hours, 43 of them by artillery fire.

The U.S. Command reported five B52 missions were flown against North Vietnam from noon Saturday to noon Sunday. Most were concentrated just above the western end of the demilitarized zone.

American fighter-bombers made 20 strikes against the North, but the command "had no significant bomb damage assessment" to report. The fighter bombers also flew 234 tactical missions in the South and pilots reported destroying several enemy bunkers and emplacements.

Monkeys Threatened

Rio de Janeiro (AP) — Brazilian conservationists say Amazon monkeys are threatened with extinction by commercial hunters and by people who illegally export them for medical research, the AJP news agency reported.

Nixon Pick For Pentagon Post Involved In Argentine Oil Deal Suit

Dallas (AP) — William P. Clements Jr., picked by President Nixon to be No. 2 man at the Pentagon, is a defendant in a civil suit charging conspiracy to hide millions in alleged profits from an Argentine oil deal.

The dispute includes an income tax fight and allegations that funds from a Clements company were used for bribery.

Repeated efforts to reach Clements for comment on the affair were unsuccessful.

Nomination of the 55-year-old Dallas oilman to be deputy secretary of defense was announced last Tuesday.

Virtually Unnoticed
Basically, the complicated and virtually unnoticed civil suit involves charges by an Argentine businessman that Clements, several business associates and Southeastern Drilling Co. of Dallas cheated him on commissions for his help in obtaining one of the largest oil-drilling contracts in history.

One of the more sensitive aspects of the suit is an allegation that high officials of the Argentine government were bribed in 1958 and 1959 in connection with the contract.

A jury rejected the contention Southeastern funds were used for bribery. But a federal appeals judge subsequently said there was evidence to support the contention.

1,000 Wells
The four-year contract to drill 1,000 wells helped propel Southeastern, which Clements founded in 1947 from a relatively small wildcat outfit to a worldwide operation that last year grossed $120 million.

Clements and members of his family invested $310 of personal funds in the Argentine operation, court records show. The contract was so successful that within five years this investment was worth at least $4.2 million to them.

Another key aspect of the case is that Southeastern, now known as Sedco, Inc., has acknowledged it destroyed many of its Argentine records in 1964 shortly after drilling was completed and the subsidiaries handling the operation dissolved.

Cannot Vouch
The accounting firm of Haskins & Sells has audited Dallas records of the Argentine operation, but says it cannot vouch for accuracy without the Argentine records.

Whether Southeastern may have violated the Argentine commercial code by destroying records may be an issue when the conspiracy and fraud phase of the six-year-old case comes to trial this spring. The case already has been through one trial and two appeals.

Legal sources say that under Argentine law a businessman is required to keep all records for 10 years after completion of a particular transaction.

Plaintiffs say also that without the full records it may be impossible to determine true profits.

Repeated References
Documents and transcripts in various federal courts in Dallas, Washington and New Orleans and at the Securities and Exchange Commission contain repeated references to disputes between the Internal Revenue Service and Sedco and between the IRS and Clements and several of his associates in the Argentine operation.

For example, a lawyer opposing Clements and Sedco made this unchallenged remark during a pretrial conference in U.S. District Court at Dallas Feb. 5, 1968:

"If I understand correctly, the contention of the IRA at this time . . . was that the entire Southeastern of Panama and Southeastern Drilling Co. of Argentina, S.A. both sister companies to Sedco was a sham setup and in effect amounted to United States source income and they will seek something like $9 million from them."

No formal claim for additional personal or corporate income taxes could be found in federal District Court in Dallas or U.S. Tax Court in Washington.

Paid $3.27 Million
But, in a Dec. 22, 1970, registration statement on file at the SEC, Sedco included a brief footnote saying it had paid the government $3.27 million one year earlier as settlement for additional income taxes for 1961 through 1967.

It said the additional taxes related primarily to "transactions with foreign subsidiaries."

The status of any IRS dispute with Clements and his associates over personal income taxes arising from their profit on the Argentine transaction could not be learned.

IRS officials in Dallas said they are forbidden by law to comment.

Stanley Krysa, a Justice Department tax lawyer in Washington whose name appears frequently on the court dockets in the civil suit, said he is unaware of any IRS claim, corporate or personal, against Sedco or any officers or directors now or in the past.

Only Interest
He said the government's only interest in the case is collecting money due from two American middlemen who helped set up the Argentine deal and, according to U.S. Tax Court testimony, later left the United States to avoid paying taxes on hundreds of thousands of dollars in commissions.

Clements, a Dallas native is chairman of the board of Sedco and owns more than $100 million in its stock. The day his nomination was announced, Clements said in a statement he had no plans to sell his stock, but would confer about it with members of the Senate Armed Services Committee, which must pass on the nomination.

Neither Sedco nor any of its four domestic subsidiaries is listed in Pentagon books as holding any significant defense contracts. The company's annual reports show more than 80% of its business is overseas.

It is partners with another company in a contract for construction of part of the controversial trans-Alaska oil pipeline.

Nixon Booster
Clements is a long-time supporter of the President who appointed him in 1969, to a blue-ribbon committee to study Pentagon reorganization.

During the recent election campaign, Clements was a co-chairman of the Texas Committee to Re-elect the President.

Clements' only publicly reported contribution to Nixon's re-election was a last-minute donation of $5,772 to Democrats for Nixon.

SEC records show two other Sedco executives each made stock gifts worth about $5,500 to Nixon's campaign.

Five telephone calls were placed to Clements' Dallas office and to the Pentagon where he has been spending much of his time, in an effort to obtain comment. None of the calls was returned.

Told Of Interest
Clements' lawyers in the civil suit were told of the interest of The Associated Press last Monday.

Here is the background of the civil suit according to court records:

In 1958, Clements agreed to pay a 20% commission on net profits to two men — Charles F. O'Neill, a Washington lawyer, and William N. Dillin, a Corpus Christi, Tex., oil operator — if they could obtain for SOUTHEASTERN A Contract to drill oil wells in Argentina.

Dillin and O'Neill told Clements they would split 50-50 with Antonio A. Diaz, a wealthy and influential Argentine businessman.

O'Neill and Dillin were the American middlemen Diaz task was to open doors for Southeastern into high Argentine government councils and help mount a publicity campaign that would soften a nationalistic fervor against foreign oil companies.

Not The Lowest
The contract with the Argentine government was awarded to Southeastern in February 1959 although according to testimony in a tax court action against Dillin, its bid was not the lowest of six submitted.

The initial payments out of net profits were due Oct. 1, 1963, after Southeastern completed its drilling. Testimony and court records show that by then Dillin and O'Neill had left the country to avoid taxes. Although they and Diaz eventually got paid more than $2 million, they all expected more.

The three made repeated requests to Southeastern for full records of the Argentine deal. By this time, the government of Arturo Frondizi had been ousted, partly over the issue of foreign oil contracts.

Made Exception
The new government stopped payment on existing foreign contracts, according to court records, except to Southeastern which it continued to pay quietly because the original contract had been approved by the government bank. It was the only contract with such approval.

In a letter June 1, 1964 to a Washington lawyer representing Dillin and O'Neill, Southeastern general counsel Tom B. Rhodes said Southeastern was worried about where any "accounting inquiry would go" and about the possibility information might "fall into improper hands."

In 1968 in answer to a series of legal interrogatories Southeastern said for the first time all Argentine records except the general ledger and general journal were destroyed on orders of Rhodes in 1964.

Diaz sued Southeastern Clements and three other Southeastern shareholders or executives in December 1966 charging them with conspiracy and fraud.

He said the Argentine deal actually netted more than $25 million in profits instead of the $18 million reported.

Diaz contends also there has been no proper accounting of millions of dollars which he says Southeastern charged off to expenses and deducted from profits.

The first trial in February 1968 revolved around the preliminary issue of whether Dillin and O'Neill had sold parts of their interest, and assigned another portion to Diaz allegedly to pay bribes.

Correspondence among the three contains code names for high Argentine officials including that of Arturo Sabato, then director of the government oil ministry.

This correspondence, in which oil wells are referred to as "frozen fish" and Sabato is called "Mr. Carter," is in the voluminous court file at Dallas, clipped together with a hand-written notation saying: "Did not go to jury."

Diaz broke even in the jury trial, winning a claim that one assignment of money to him as valid, while the jury said the other was not.

The validity of the assignments was tied to the bribery issue which was sensitive because as the transcript of the 1968 trial shows Diaz was fearful of identifying men behind the code names who were still in the Argentine government.

Diaz denied any bribes were paid. He said code names were used to protect participants in behind-the-scenes negotiations and was normal corporate security.

Diaz asked to have newsmen barred while he gave the names. But Judge Leo Brewster noted none was present anyway.

Judge James P. Coleman of the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans noted later that the issue was also sensitive because proof of bribery would have rendered assignments to Diaz void under Argentine law.

In the trial, the lower court judge barred some evidence as hearsay although nearly a third of the testimony was directed to the contention of bribery.

Judge Coleman upheld the ruling and the finding of the jury which in answers to a series of questions said it did not believe Diaz O'Neill and Dillin intended to use certain funds for bribery.

But, said Coleman "there was evidence to support the contention, had it been accepted by the jury."

In his written opinion, Coleman quotes extensively from testimony about a visit by Arturo Sabato to Southeastern's Dallas offices in 1963.

He includes comments in the transcript made by one of the attorneys out of the jury's hearing that Sabato visited Southeastern "for the purpose of determining if any money had been left here for him."

Girls Wounded By Sitter After Refusing To Go To Bed

Warren, Mich. (UPI) — A 16-year-old babysitter accidentally shot two young girls with a 16-gauge shotgun when they refused to go to bed, police said Sunday.

The two girls, aged 5 and 7, received wounds in the stomach and legs when the pellets ricocheted off the floor. One remained hospitalized.

Survivor for observation. Police said the girls had gone to bed Saturday night before the arrival of the babysitter, a 16-year-old boy. They got up to watch television with him after their parents left.

"He told them to get in bed or he was going to shoot them," Warren Police Detective Joseph Drain said.

When they refused the boy went for the shotgun hanging on the wall in the family room. Drain said.

"Well, he took the gun down and cocked the hammer on it. At that point, after telling them to get back in bed, apparently he tried to put the hammer back down and in the process the hammer slipped and accidentally fired the gun," Drain said.

The boy was in the custody of his parents pending further interrogation by police Monday, Drain said.

The identities of the babysitter and girls were withheld.

IN PERSPECTIVE

By RUSSELL BAKER

(Note: Today's column is by humorist Russell Baker. Mr. Dobler's column will be resumed shortly.)

WASHINGTON — The White House announced today that President Nixon has accepted the resignation of Santa Claus. Reports that Claus's resignation had been picked up in a moment of presidential pique after the old man had refused Nixon's request for a new mountain for Christmas were "nonsense," according to White House publicists. So is the White House's statement that Claus "had long expressed a desire to leave public life and spend more time at home with his family."

It is no secret in Washington that Claus and Mrs. Claus have not been on speaking terms since 1969 when Claus made his annual round-the-world trip by Pan American instead of sleigh and carried on scandalously with two stewardesses over the Christmas punch bowl in the first-class lounge.

Claus's home, moreover, consists of a large number of surly, underpaid elves who work under barbarous conditions in an unheated factory next to his house and 12 reindeer. Two years ago he required the legal services of Edward Bennett Williams to defend himself before the NLRB against charges of sweating elf labor in a cold shop.

So much for White House pieties about Claus's yearning for private life. The facts behind his resignation are rather more interesting. In fact, the debate over Claus's resignation has pitted the President's political executioners against his image polishers.

The former take intense pride in their own ruthlessness. Among each other they compete with boasts calculated to show that one is more savage than the other in his loyalty to President Nixon. What is more natural than that one should say: "Why, I'd fire Santa Claus for the President!"

Thus offer had an attentive audience. The President had been sick and tired of Claus for some time. Privately, he has complained that Claus has consistently failed to speak out for the work ethic. The random handouts with which Claus has been associated have always been regarded within the administration as evidence of leftist economic tendencies.

It is likely that Claus would have gone the way of George Romney and Father Hesburgh long before now had the President's image advisers not insisted that he be kept until after the election.

The breaking point came the day after Thanksgiving when the President made a secret trip down from the mountain to meet with Claus. The President's mood was not improved by being forced to stand in line until his turn came to approach Claus on a gaudy throne.

Nor, we may imagine, was his temper brightened by listening to the attending mothers and fathers comment among themselves about what a lovable man Santa Claus was.

Certainly we know that when the President's turn came and he sat down on Claus's lap to have his picture taken, his reply to Claus's first question — "And what do you want me to bring you for Christmas, Mister President?" — was not, as alleged in certain news magazines, "a new mountain and a Washington Redskins' football helmet."

Not at all. What the President said was, "You think you're more lovable than I am, don't you, Claus?"

Claus denied it but the more lovably he denied it, the more vehement the President became until, at length, he proposed a competition.

Claus would sit on his throne and the President would sit in his president's chair, and everybody would line up, and as the file went past everybody would have to decide whether to sit on Claus's lap or on the President's lap, and that way they could tell who was the more lovable.

Claus protested because he knew that all the people in the line would be oil kings, textile dukes, banking earls, electronics marquesses, aerospace barons and publishing baronets, and he was right. Every last person chose to bypass Claus's lap for the President's, and their Christmas wishes have been coming true ever since.

Claus will be on the street corner shaking a bell over an empty pot today. One would think he'd get out and get a job instead of waiting for a handout.

Time Might Come When Job Is Hobby

NEW YORK — The expert see it coming probably within 12 years — the 29-hour work week followed by five day weekends for pleasure and relaxation. Or if an employee so chooses he (she) may elect to work a split shift a half year in the office and a half year on vacation.

With the computer taking over much of big business workload and with the women's movement zooming more females into the work force it appears that there simply will not be enough man hours to go around.

So the Age of Increasing Leisure is the only solution to avoid mass unemployment.

The movement toward such a layman's dream world got underway officially this summer. Some firms here in the East began experimenting with a three-day work week in which employees put in longer days (up to 12½ hours) and had a four-day weekend. It was largely a successful venture, with companies reporting considerable economic advantages to keeping facilities going full-steam-ahead for long, concentrated shifts, and then closing down costly operations for lengthy "weekends."

One of our neighbors who is senior vice president of one such business reports that the usual five-day work week had to be reinstalled in the autumn however because employees were largely unwilling to face commuting to and from work on the short winter days in darkness. And he didn't particularly relish four day weekends either with the probability of being home-bound because the weather is too miserable to go out in. Only a few executives who happened also to be ski nuts wanted to continue the summer shift throughout the year.

This problem he predicted will eventually be worked out. The economic aspects will prevail over the sociological.

The Southern California Research Council studied the six-month vacation concept and declared that if the average American is willing to accept the same standard of living he enjoys today, it will be adopted in the business world. The council found it probable however that many — probably most — Americans will prefer to continue working the usual 11 months for additional income.

The old Puritan Work Ethic and the new materialism are strongly entrenched, still, in this nation's psyche.

But the four-day week is almost a certain prospect which is quickly becoming a reality. And while sociologists are beginning to worry about the inevitability of the New Leisure (it is sure to cause serious problems of physical and psychological adjustment), the travel industry is excited and delighted.

Patrick R. Sheridan, president of Gray Line Sight Seeing Companies, predicts that many people will not be able to cope with leisure time. They will face sloth and television at leisure. Others with a vacation ethic will be uncomfortable when not working, and still others will be depressed by the anxieties of planning their weekly leisure.

Floodplain Controversy Raised

The plight of a Lincoln couple whose new house fails to meet state floodplain zoning standards has brought to the surface the conflict between the city and the state over floodplain zoning regulations.

The Capitol Beach home in question was built this past summer and has been occupied since Sept. 1. It was brought to the attention of the Nebraska Natural Resources Commission that the developers or the city never checked with the commission to see if the home met floodplain zoning standards. According to Al Mathews, the commission's floodplain administrator, the house isn't built to minimum standards and would have to be raised two feet to meet them. Although it's conceivable that the state could order the house moved, it is unlikely it will do so because of the hardship involved.

But the incident did allow Mathews to criticize the city on two counts for not consulting with the state before the house was built and for not adopting floodplain zoning regulations.

As to the first point, nothing in state law requires the city to notify the state when the regulations are violated, but the city nevertheless makes it a practice to consult with the state to see that building permit applications fall within state regulations. There was an apparent slip-up this time and there should be closer cooperation if the state continues to administer floodplain zoning in Lincoln.

On the latter count, when the state floodplain zoning law was enacted, municipalities were given a year to pass comprehensive floodplain zoning ordinances. Lincoln failed to do so and thus the state preempted the field. Lincoln does have, however, a city council resolution prohibiting the extension of utilities (such as water, sewer and paving) into the floodplains and that philosophy has been incorporated into the land subdivision ordinance which regulates construction in such areas.

A municipality ought to be able to control flood plain zoning within its jurisdiction — if there is some uniformity of law throughout the state — and the existing act should probably be amended to allow it. Lincoln, after all, has had more experience in the zoning business than the state.

Scali To United Nations

President Nixon's well-known distrust of the news media, underlined again last week by Rep. Charles Thone of Nebraska apparently is not all-encompassing.

In one of his more startling appointments, Nixon named special consultant John Scali, who advises the President on press matters, as U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations. Former newsman Scali replaces George Bush who was switched but not promoted to Republican National Chairman.

Scali is not a household word but the fellow who toiled as a diplomatic correspondent for the ABC television network and before that worked for United Press International and the Associated Press is acquainted in diplomatic circles and has even been pressed into service during a tense international situation. Scali was the unofficial intermediary between President John F. Kennedy and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev during the 1963 Cuban missile crisis.

The appointment may tell something about the President's opinion of the United Nations or at least of its importance. Without at all downgrading Scali's capabilities, it can be said that he is a relative unknown and he replaces an ambassador who just recently won his spurs for meritorious service in America's behalf in the United Nations. Bush by almost everyone's estimation was a respected force within the worldwide organization.

Nixon's regard for the United Nations is not much higher than his level of trusting most newsmen, however.

It is hoped that Scali, by dint of his knowledge of diplomatic affairs and old friendships as well as ability, will as they say grow in the job.

Swing-Man In The Quai

PARIS — Maurice Schumann, present tenant of the Quai d'Orsay by nature an optimist is also one of the most energetic of France's foreign ministers. He seems to see this country as a kind of swing-man initiating ideas or diplomatic contacts between warring parties around the world. He certainly has no illusions that it's old nation remains a superpower but obviously doesn't feel it therefore condemned to intellectual or political stagnation.

Hence he views evidences of growing friendship between West and East as a logical development of France's own Ostpolitik, which was started by President de Gaulle long before Willy Brandt was German chancellor.

He wants to follow up on Brandt's recent electoral triumph by starting negotiations to recognize East Germany as soon as the treaty between the two Germans is signed. Brandt's victory makes it obvious there is no need to await ratification — now a foregone conclusion — and delay in recognition might foster divisions among Western allies.

The Russians French diplomacy argues don't want

West Germany as their exclusive or privileged partner in Europe. Therefore they in view President Pompidou on a non-official visit to Brezhnev next month. Brezhnev is pointed out chose France as the first non-communist land with which to exchange state visits and when leaving suggested that further working conversations be held. Schumann first discussed the forthcoming Pompidou trip in New York with Gromyko last September.

France thinks the Kremlin is just as eager to dispel any idea that the two superpowers are trying to divide the world into spheres of influence as Nixon on his part has made clear, and as Secretary of State Rogers emphasized to the NATO foreign ministers this month.

As the Indo-Chinese war inches toward an end, France is also not reluctant to claim a share in helping the negotiations. Since Schumann saw Nixon in the White House Sept. 29 he has personally remained in contact with the main parties.

Schumann has seen Kissinger on the subject five times since September — twice in Washington and three times in Paris — as well as leading North and South Vietnamese representatives here. The French view the negotiations as trying to settle two separate conflicts — a civil war in Vietnam and a war between the U.S.A. and North Vietnam. They claim responsibility for several provisions of the ultimate agreement and also for arranging compromises on others.

Another crisis area where Paris seeks to play a role is the Middle East. While there has been some change of emphasis to begin with while maintaining an embargo on weapons sales to Israel or its neighbors, France negotiated a repayment to Israel of the cost of Mirage aircraft purchased here and then embargoed.

The repayment included accrued interest. Furthermore, Paris has warned Libya that it cannot station in Egypt any of the Mirages Libya bought or create a single armed force with Egypt.

While the French don't pretend to any hope for an imminent Middle East settlement, they think the latest U.N. General Assembly resolution isn't bad for Israel. The view

More ending than beginnings?

Maybe it only seems that way as we rush toward the conclusion of 1972. A week from today is Christmas (take note, late shopper), and two weeks from this moment is 1973.

In the week that was, the USA concluded its program of manned missions to the moon. Not, it seems, in order to devote more of our resources to long-neglected social programs. More, it seems, because we have lost a sense of adventure and are more inclined to devote more of our resources to our billfolds.

Goodbye moon, hello consumer product.

In the week that was, the Democratic Party may have concluded its experiment as a people's party. The key word is "may."

Goodbye Westwood; hello Strauss. Goodbye Utah; hello Texas. Goodbye McGovern; hello Connally.

No fair to judge Robert Strauss in advance of his chairmanship. He should be given time to perform first.

But the portents are clear back to the establishment, to Texas oil money back to a national party posture acceptable to John Connally and George Meany and James Eastland.

In the week that was Life died. The magazine, that is, not the process.

Alert news magazines and newspapers will attempt to fill part of the gap with more extensive and imaginative use of photos. But there will be a lasting void for the reader who enjoyed a long studied look at a great photograph. On the

When Murder Is Forgotten

WASHINGTON — In all the hoopla about the million-dollar sacking of the Bureau of Indian Affairs building last month the Indians legitimate cries for help have been largely drowned out.

The Broken Treaties Papers, taken by the ton from the building and made available to us by the Indians tell of land deals, water grabs and appalling neglect by the federal government.

But the small stories found in the documents are often more poignant than the big scandals. Document after document touches on the same theme: the daily struggle by the Indians for dignity, for equal treatment as Americans.

There's a confidential murder report for example from BIA investigator Peter Three Stars. It is written in staid, police-blotter language, but near the end the emotion finally breaks through.

Terse, Peter Three Stars describes the brutal murder of two old Indian women last June on the Wisconsin reservation of the Lac du Flambeau Chippewas. "On June 13, two elderly, local tribal members were severely tube, the great pictures are gone in a fleeting moment. But for every ending, there must be a beginning. You know, goodbye 1972; hello 1973.

Hey, would you look at this winter!

Whether you like the cold or the snow or not, ya gotta admit, we've been favored with a particularly beautiful winter so far.

In the week that was, we had some gorgeous sunny days to bathe our world in brilliance, lighting the snow and ice clinging to the trees and spread across the ground.

The mornings in which the cold air was filled with tiny ice crystals, floating, sifting and shining in the sunlight, were spectacular.

Autumn may be the sooper season in our state (although it was not up to par this year) but a snowy winter is hard to beat.

It's the cloudy gloomy days without either sun or snow which make the winter seem long.

So think snow, people. And we can have one dazzling day after another on the way to spring.

Hey you better get your order in quick. Old man Claus may be running out of gifts.

Johnny already has his Heisman.

Dicky got his four more years a month ago.

Bobby didn't get everything he hoped for, but he was given one crack at Notre Dame before he hangs 'em up.

Henry got a coupon of round-trip tickets to Paris (all expenses paid), and Billy got to keep his job at the State Department whatever it is that he does.

Jimmy gets to enter the second half of his term next month with a certificate of guaranteed popularity with the electorate.

Richie and Willie have had their socks filled with honors, and Pitty hasn't had to turn back a single bowl ticket order request for a change.

Woolly found an election day gift in the returns from Omaha and Carlie was blessed early with a bride.

Ya better let Claus know what you want quick. He's been passing out the goodies a little early this year.

There are still some trains and jeeps and plenty of Barbies and furry animals.

But if you want a cabinet post or a conference championship, sorry. They're all gone. He's fresh out of Senate seats. No more tickets to the moon. Not a single presidency undelivered.

But there are lots of balloons left. Ask for one. They're more fun, anyway.

Finally the state came down, and we gave them our clues and they have a suspect," he said. "We got almost no help from the local people. It took us four months to get the wheels moving."

Ten seamen from the Navy cargo ship Francis Marion sent a signed complaint to Navy chief Adm. Elmo Zumwalt.

"We feel it's about time someone wrote about the conditions and harassment on board," they wrote. They griped about little things like haircut standards. "You almost have to go bald," they complained.

But what was "really bothering the crew," they said, was the condition of the ship. They cited such failings as generators that don't load properly, noisy reduction gears, metal slivers in the oil strainer, faulty evaporators and bad pumps. The ship was unfit to leave the pier, they said.

Not until we heard about it and began asking questions, however, did the Navy belatedly respond. Next day, a long letter was rushed off to the seamen conceding much of their criticism was justified.

President Nixon entered into direct negotiations with the South Vietnamese after the U.S. embassy in Saigon reported that President Thieu had lost confidence in Henry Kissinger. He complained that Kissinger had accepted a draft submitted by the North Vietnamese in negotiating a cease-fire agreement. Thieu proposed agreement objected Thieu was too hasty. It failed to take into account the complexities of the Vietnam war.

President Nixon's 26-year-old nephew Donald A. Nixon has made the front pages despite patient efforts by the White House to keep him out of trouble. He has turned up as a personal aide in the Bahamas to financier Robert Vesco, who has been accused by the Securities and Exchange Commission of attempting to divert $224 million in mutual funds to his personal use.

POSTCARD

by

Stan Delaplaine

Getting close to Christmas and cold as a well digger's memories. When I got up in the morning, there was a skim of ice on Snug Harbor. The seagulls were walking on it.

A scatter with all floor-to-ceiling sliding glass doors will not hold heat.

I built a fire in the fireplace. It smoked up the room so that we were all teary eyed.

"Are you sure the damper is open," cried the children wiping their weeping eyes.

Well, I had forgotten that. I got a poker end in the lever that opens and closes the thing. But for the life of me could not remember which way was open. Up or down?

I tried it both ways. The fire still smoked.

I said, "Open all the doors and windows."

The moppets cried: "Let's put on our overcoats. We'll all freeze to death while father builds the fire."

I said: "What about cooperation instead of criticism?"

Science has done a lot about balding. But the scientists lose hair as fast as the stupid fellows.

There is not much a man can do when his hair drops out for a breather and never catches its breath.

Females do not get bald. Yet they do dreadful things to their hair.

Rinses and sets. Streaks and backcombing. Hours under the dryer.

You would think such torture would make their hair fall like cut hay. But no. It grows lushly. Clogs combs and hair brushes. Stops up drains. Gets on blue suits.

"I must have got it on the in the elevator," he said.

The Chinese proverb says: "Of 10 bald men, nine are deceitful and the 10th is stupid."

Nobody knows why the Chinese say this. Maybe to be inscrutable. Everybody says the Chinese are inscrutable and they may just say this to live up to the image.

A scientific bloke looking into bald men says it "implies intelligence and a rise from the lower orders." Then he puts on a clincher: "Gorillas are not bald."

Gorillas are not bald. But they aren't pretty either.

Once I was a Boy Scout. I was not so smart but had plenty of hair and could make a fire that didn't smoke.

I finally got our fire going so that it only smoked a little.

"We can't breathe and our eyes are watery," cried the moppets.

I said: "Get down on the floor. The air is better there."

Lively times around the scatter. And the cold, cold wind came blowing through.

At this time of year the nine deceitful men should put on their hats. The stupid fellow probably sits around with a cold head.

At one time we had four kittens, the product of Captain Bligh, the feline Manx. Cats do not go bald. In fact they had too much hair.

We had cat hair to spare — I wished I could get it in a bunch so could spare it to someone.

The kittens were three weeks old. The mama kept them washed and polished. Like you do with a new car.

Such constant polishing you'd think would have worn the hair off them. But not so. It grew and grew. Maybe a cat's tongue is the secret ingredient.

When they lose their wavy locks, men turn to jewelry. They spend $200 million per annum on cufflinks and such.

This must be true for I hadn't a cufflink when I was a Boy Scout. Today I count 12 pair in my drawer.

New Mine Union Head Visits Fatal West Virginia Blast Site

Itmann, W Va (AP) — Newly elected United Mine Workers President Arnold Miller conferred with local miners Sunday and charged that accumulation of methane gas was responsible for the explosion that killed five miners and critically burned three others at a coal mine here.

Miller, who flew from Washington to personally direct union safety men in their investigation, said company officials informed him that the blast did not occur at the "face" or work site, but in a passageway leading back to the main entry.

"They were on their way out," Miller said. "I think it will be explainable. That's what I'm down here for. There's no way someone can be absolved of liability for a methane ignition, apparently 1,400 feet from the face."

An inspection team, which included West Virginia Mines Director John Ashcraft, Consolidation Coal Co. officials, and UMW local 9690 safety committee members, visited the explosion site Sunday. Consolidation operates the mine, known as Itmann Coal Co. No. 3.

One member of the committee said an electrical spark from a trolley-wire passenger vehicle may have ignited methane gas as the eight-man crew traveled to the surface after completing work.

"Evidently the man-car set it off," Dennis Burlison of the union local's safety committee told Miller before entering the mine.

The blast occurred shortly before 4 p.m. Saturday some 6,500 to 7,000 feet inside the rambling drift mine in a windswept valley 80 miles southeast of Charleston. The mine employs 270 men and reported only one fatality during 1971, when nearly half a million tons were taken from a 45-inch seam of high grade coal.

This was the second explosion in a year in a West Virginia mine run by Consolidation, the largest coal producer in the state.

State police at the mine portal Saturday night said rescue teams found a 5% methane gas atmosphere in the mine, high for the mine, but this could not be confirmed by company officials. Methane is explosive in concentrations of 5 to 15%.

Peter P. Feretti, a Consolidation vice president, confirmed Sunday that the mine was classified as "gaseous."

Meantime Mrs. Jerry Billings whose husband — a coal miner only three months — was burned, said: "It's expected for every coal miner, you have to look at it that way."

Mrs. Billings, expecting her first child, added after seeing her 20-year-old husband briefly at a hospital, "You can't dread it all your life or it'll drive you crazy."

J. D. Akers, a miner himself at another operation, lost two brothers in the blast at Itmann Coal Co. No. 3.

"Larry had been in there about seven years and Lacy about three months," he said.

"Why do they do it just like me I guess, stupid."

"These men called to the outside at 20 minutes to four to report they were leaving," Feretti said. "They also made a report that everything was all right. The night shift crew that was to change with them waited and waited until after 4. Then they went in to see."

The second crew "got to within about 2,200 feet" of the new work area before noticing "there was no ventilation and that the 'air was stail'" Feretti said.

"Then it was obvious there must have been an explosion." The eight were hand-pushed on supply cars out of the explosion area to avoid possible triggering of a second explosion, Feretti said. Then they were loaded on electric shuttle cars for transport to the surface on the main rail track.

Consolidation officials Sunday identified the three critically injured men as Dallas R. Mullens, 21, Pineville; Larry Bailey, 24, Pineville, and Jerry R. Billings, 20, Matoaca.

The dead were identified as:

Teddy D. McMillon, 35, Lester; Bill K. Hatfield, 44, New Richmond; David R. Meador Jr., 28, of Sprague, and brothers Lacy N. Akers, 28, Princewick, and Larry B. Akers, 24, Cove.

Last July 22, nine men died in fire at Consolidation's Blacksville No. 1 mine on the state's northern border with Pennsylvania. In that incident a piece of machinery being moved from one part of the mine to another struck an electrical wire setting off an explosion.

Four years ago on Nov. 20, 1968 an explosion at Consolidation's Farmington No. 9 mine entombed 78 men underground.

The safety record of the mine here could not immediately be determined, but it was not included in a listing last September by the U.S. Bureau of Mines as one of the nation's most gaseous operations.

Census Bureau Trims Population Projections

Washington (AP) — The Census Bureau issued new projections Sunday indicating that the U.S. population by the year 2000 will be far lower than forecast earlier. And it saw a chance the nation could reach zero population growth before 2050.

The bureau said that its old projections of population growth have become unrealistically high because of recent dramatic declines in birth rates and birth expectations.

It noted that in the first half of 1972 the total fertility rate was 2.1 births per woman of child-bearing age.

At this rate, assuming no increases in population through immigration, population in the United States would eventually reach zero growth, were it not for immigration of about 400,000 a year.

The new projections use four different assumptions of fertility rates of women — 2.3 children per family, 2.5 children, 2.1 children and 1.8 children. The last figure is the lowest ever used in a projection and would mean the population would reach a point in the next century where it would actually decline even with immigration.

The projections show that the year 2000 population could range from 251 million to 300 million people. This was down from the earlier projected range of 271 million to 322 million.

Population specialists noted that the Census Bureau is thus acknowledging that there will be 20 million fewer people at the start of the 21st century than estimated earlier.

The nation's birth rate has dropped markedly in the past two years. Actually, the first nine months of this year about two children per family is the estimated fertility rate, the bureau said.

It was the first time that the usually conservative Census Bureau has estimated that the population is getting close to the level of replacement, meaning that it would eventually reach a stable level within 50 to 60 years.

The projections show that in the year 2020 the population could be as low as 264 million if the lowest fertility rate is used. If the current rate of birth is used, the population in that year would be 297 million.

The highest projection for the year 2020 is 392 million, using the figure of 2.8 births per woman of child-bearing age.

Poll: Lack Of Faith In Quality Of Goods Increases Support For Nader

By LOUIS HARRIS

A sizable 56% of the American people agree with the statement that "the quality of most things I buy has become worse" compared with standards 10 years ago. These results indicate that the upsurge of consumerism in the country which crested in the sixties continues unabated.

As a direct result of this continued lack of confidence in the quality of goods and services people buy, support for consumer advocates such as Ralph Nader also has risen. Back in 1971, 53% of the public felt that Nader "did more good than harm," but in late 1972 the number supporting Nader rose to 60%.

Here is the trend of public thinking about Nader and his activities:

—By a massive 80-7%, the public agrees with the statement that "it is good to have critics like Nader to keep industry on its toes." Back in 1971, the division who agreed with that claim was 69-3%.

—By 65-18%, nearly a 4-to-1 margin, the American people agree with the statement "there never would have been strict federal safety regulations for cars if Nader had not crusaded for auto safety." Last year, the margin who credited Nader with being a prime mover in achieving added auto safety was 52-15%.

—By 56-15%, the recent publication by Nader's group of the records of every member of Congress and assessments of their effectiveness has met with public approval.

—On a long-standing claim of Nader's — that "the average consumer should have a voice in top corporate decisions" — the public sides with the Nader position by 52-28%. In 1971, the division

Credit Card Operations Cost Banks Money

Cleveland, Ohio — Banks are losing money on credit card operations, a multi-billion-dollar market, the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland says.

Average losses on operations ranged from $11.73 to $3.18 per active credit card account, the reserve bank reported after surveying nearly 300 U.S. banks.

The reserve bank said the key factors were what amounted to a 25-day interest-free loan to credit card users who pay in full each month, plus high processing cost compared to that for checks.

Other problems cited were loan losses and the cost of getting money to finance the credit-card operations.

Middle-Of-The-Roader Is Endorsed By Peron

Buenos Aires (AP) — Juan D. Peron has left Argentina again, wandering in self-imposed exile, minus much of his aura as a legendary leader.

Peron flew to Paraguay last week after disappointing thousands of followers with his decision not to be a presidential candidate in the March 11 elections.

The 77-year-old populist leader is flying to Lima, Peru, on Monday. He'll spend Christmas at his Madrid home, then might visit Romania and mainland China before returning to Argentina in January or February for the election campaign.

From abroad, away from the pressures of Argentine politics and the divisions in his own movement, Peron endorsed a middle-of-the-roader as the presidential nominee of his Justicialist party, the largest in Argentina. The candidate is

Dr. Hector Campora, a dentist, who has been Peron's closest adviser in recent months. Campora was a congressman and ambassador while Peron was president from 1946 to 1955.

Peron's "historic resignation" — as some called his decision not to run — came Thursday in the final hour of the ex-president's 28-day "return to Argentina" after 17 years in exile. The resignation and the subsequent announcement early Saturday of Campora's candidacy were particularly disappointing to the Peronist youth organization and other radical Peronist sectors. They had hoped that Peron would be swept into the presidency next March to lead a "profound revolution."

On Saturday night terrorists blew up part of a modern international tourist hotel in Parana where a meeting of provincial public works ministers was being held. Four employees of the hotel were reported injured, one of them critically.

The explosion was believed to be the beginning of a new guerrilla campaign after the one-month pause that accompanied Peron's visit to Argentina.

The conservative military junta which rules Argentina placed an "irrevocable ban" on Peron's candidacy. And the aging leader, in the final hour of his stay here, acknowledged that he would not defy the ban. Nor did he criticize the arrest order issued for Rodolfo Galimberti, Marxist president of the Peronist youth organization. Galimberti is accused of inciting to violence. He had urged Peronists to arm themselves for public demonstrations in Peron's behalf.

Peron kept away from the public and discouraged demonstrations.

The decision not to seek the presidency again ended a major chapter in Peron's complicated career. During his years in exile, Peron hinted that he would eventually return to lead another government.

Nevertheless, in his new role of moderate elder statesman, Peron remains a powerful influence on Argentine politics. He is still the idol of the urban and rural poor who remember the "Peronist years" when they were the beneficiaries of social reform laws, frequent salary increases, and a nationwide welfare program administered personally by Peron and his late wife, Eva.

Sling Rigged Between 2 Cranes To Lift Nose Of Crippled 747 Jet

Miami, Fla. (AP) — Workmen rigged a huge sling between two cranes Sunday to lift the nose of a crippled Northwest Orient 747 jetliner out of the mud at the end of a Miami International Airport runway.

The 380-ton jumbo jet slid off the runway Friday during an emergency landing in a rainstorm after a flock of seagulls was sucked into two of its engines on takeoff.

Officials said the jet, with 149 passengers and 11 crew members aboard, slid 200 feet past the end of the strip when its engines failed to reverse properly.

The nose gear on the jet collapsed when it struck the foundation of a demolished building, dropping the front end of the aircraft into the mud. Four passengers were slightly injured when they slid down escape chutes.

Workmen Saturday constructed a gravel road to the jet. They then ran a huge sling under the nose of the jet and lifted it onto a flat-bed trailer with two cranes.

A spokesman for Boeing, which makes the 747, said it was not unusual for birds to strike a plane but "it is relatively unusual for them to be ingested into the engines."

Rangoon Burma (AP) — A huge fire swept the coastal town of Mergui, killing five firemen and destroying more than 7,000 homes, according to reports reaching Rangoon Sunday.

Forty thousand people were made homeless and school and government offices were razed in the fire which started in the kitchen of a house Saturday.

The conflagration raged for 15 hours in a strong sea breeze. Mergui is 500 miles southeast of Rangoon.

Ham Anns Provide Varied Programs

Everyone seeks entertainment of one sort or another, whether it is simply spending a quiet evening at home enjoying programs on the television, listening to the stereo, or going out to attend a play, concert or movie.

Even many organizations — large or small, civic or social — are often faced with finding program entertainment for meetings or annual banquets. That is where the Lincoln Community Playhouse Ham Anns come in. The Ham Anns, the latest addition to the LCP's many performing groups and an outgrowth of the Playhouse Guild, offers just that type of program service.

Organized a mere four months ago, the group already has performed many times in the area and has booked several performances well into 1973. Their varied repertoire includes the production and direction of short plays and skits, dramatic readings and poetry, music presentations and book reviews.

According to Mrs. Mark Muffley, co-chairman of the group along with Mrs. Dale Pierce, the membership, as well as the popularity of Ham Anns is growing in leaps and bounds. Mrs. Muffley stated that everytime the group appears, a member of the audience approaches one of the Ham Anns, expressing a wish to perform with them — thus another name is added to the growing list.

Another function of Ham Anns is Clown Alley, which will soon be in full operation. Men and women in Clown Alley have been instructed in clown make-up and the art of clowning, and they are also registered members of Clowns of America, a national clown organization.

The directors of the Ham Anns' often-request plays include Mrs. Roger Dickson, chairman, Mrs. Steve Ives, Henry Walling, Dale Williamson, Roger Hendrickson, Mrs. Muffley, Miss Jean Sanders, Mrs. Lawrence Enerson, Mrs. Jack Andrews and Miss Linda White.

The group often performs or directs original skits, many of which are written by its members. The most recent is "The Mouse Who Didn't Believe in Santa," under the direction of Mrs. Imes, which was performed by kindergarten through sixth grade students of Morley Elementary School. The students presented the play at Morley School, Rousseau Elementary School, the Westminster Presbyterian Church and the Lincoln Community Playhouse.

Mrs. Imes was assisted in make-up by Mrs. Muffley, Mrs. Frank Witters was in charge of props and Mrs. Larry Zieler arranged the costumes.

Holiday Programs

It was a festive occasion on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 9, when the Phi Mu Mother's Club sponsored its annual mother-daughter luncheon.

The mother's club, of which Mrs. Tom Moorcroft of Waverly serves as president, meets two times each year, with the mother-daughter luncheon being the highlight of the year.

Special guests at the annual event were Mrs. Roger Rhodes, president of the sorority's Lincoln Alumnae Association; Mrs. Dean Petersen, president of the corporation board; as well as other alumnae of Phi Mu sorority.

At a 7 o'clock ceremony which took place on Sunday evening, Dec. 17, the marriage of Miss Ellen N. Feather, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Feather of Bridgeport, to William A. Ward, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jean Ward, was solemnized at the Piedmont Seventh Day Adventist Church. Elder James Melancon read the lines of the service.

The bride chose Mrs. Ray Swick to be her honor attendant, and Mrs. Bruce Bottsford of Roca, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Alan Gillaspie, sister of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids. Miss Marlys May of Upton, Wyo. and Miss Esther Feather of Keene, Tex. served as bridesmaids.

Timothy Ward attended his brother as best man, and the corps of groomsmen included Craig Loos, Larry Thompson, Mylo Busing and Steve Markle. Kenneth Feather of Tekamah, and Alan Gillaspie seated the guests.

For her wedding, the bride selected a gown of white velvet designed in the Empire mode. The fitted bodice was accented with vertical bands of Venice lace, and the lace was repeated to trim the wedding band collar and the cuffs of the long, Bishop sleeves. Beneath the raised waistline, the skirt was softly gathered. Her floor-length mantilla was edged with lace, and she carried a bouquet of chrysanthemums and gypsophila.

Following a brief wedding trip, Mr. Ward and his bride will make their home in Lincoln.

The bride is a student at Union College where she majors in education. Mr. Ward is a student at the University of Nebraska.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	3♥	Dble	4♥
Dble	Pass	4NT	Pass
8♣	Pass	Pass	Dble

Opening lead — eight of clubs.

This deal occurred in the match between Italy and Australia during the 1968 World Bridge Olympiad.

At the first table, with Australia North-South, the Italian East-West pair got to five diamonds doubled and South led his singleton club. North won with the ace and returned a club, which South ruffed, and North later scored two trump tricks to put declarer down three and score 500 points for Australia.

At the second table, with Italy now North-South, the bidding went:

West led the king of clubs and Forquet, playing with Garozzo, had to find a way of avoiding a trump loser on top of the three spades he had to lose. This he proceeded to do — despite East's four trumps to the queen — by winning the club with the ace and commencing a trump-shortening process by ruffing a club at trick two.

Forquet then led a heart to the ace, returned the nine from dummy, which held, and ruffed another club. Next he played a diamond to the queen, the finesse succeeding.

and cashed the ace of diamonds before ruffing dummy's last club.

By this time Forquet had won the first eight tricks and was left with the 10-4-3 of spades and K-J of trumps. He exited with a spade and could not be stopped from scoring two more trump tricks, so the outcome was that Italy scored 590 points and showed an unresounding but clear proof of 90 points on the deal.

Afternoon Wedding

The marriage of Miss Sue E. Schlichtemeier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart T. Schlichtemeier of Murray to Ronald E. Sorensen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gunnar Sorensen, was solemnized at a 3 o'clock ceremony which took place on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 2, at the Community Church in Bennet. The Rev. George Roquet officiated.

Miss Lori Schlichtemeier of Murray served her sister as the maid of honor, and Mrs. Wayne Andersen of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Miss Cindy Axelsen of Sioux City, Iowa, were bridesmaids and bridesmaid, respectively.

Mick Pierce attended Mr. Sorensen as best man, and the groomsmen were Jack Handa and Dick Hahn. Don Schlichtemeier and Ken Green seated the guests.

The bride appeared in a gown of antique satin designed in the Empire mode. The high neckline was trimmed with Alencon lace, and the taut bodice was completed with long, fitted sleeves. Beneath the raised waistline, the dirndl skirt featured a narrow ruffle which encircled the hem beneath a wide band of the lace. Her lace-edged mantilla extended to Cotillion length, and she carried a cascade of roses, carnations and chrysanthemums.

Abby: age alone does not bring maturity

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Recently there has been a lot of publicity about a romance between two celebrities—the woman being quite a bit older than the man. What a switch! Hooray for the man who publicly stated that he prefers "mature" women.

For years, women have watched older men go for young girls, and now along comes a handsome, talented young man who isn't ashamed to let the world know that he prefers a "mature" woman. What a boost that has been to the morale of the middle-aged woman.

Thank "you-know-who" for me, will you, Abby?

A MATURE WOMAN
DEAR MATURE: Mature men always have preferred mature women. But maturity doesn't automatically come with age alone. I say, "hooray for both of them!"

DEAR ABBY: I can no longer remain silent. Mothers who read their children's diaries deserve what they get.

As a child, I kept a diary, and I'm sure my mother would have turned white had she read it. Perhaps my mother was unusual, but I know she never touched my diary, because I always left it a certain way so I could tell if it had been opened, and it never had.

Abby, I was a very romantic child, and my fantasies were positively wild! I recorded "experiences" in my diary that took place only in my imagination. For example: "I must be careful not to call Mr. Smith 'Pete' in front of my parents because they are very friendly with him and his wife. I wonder what my folks would say if they knew that I sneak out every night to meet him secretly." (I was all of 14 years old, and poor Mr. Smith never gave me more than a fatherly pat on the head, but I had a mad crush on him.)

I also wrote, (at 15), "I think I am pregnant. The doctor says he isn't sure, but I think he's wrong. If I am, I'll have to run away because I wouldn't know who the father is. . . . I've had so many lovers." Now that I am married and have children of my own, I'd never dare to read their diaries. I haven't the courage!

Thanks for letting me say this.

GOOD MEMORY
DEAR GOOD: And thanks for a good letter.

State's Poultry Industry Is Undergoing Changes

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

"In spite of all you hear to the contrary, Nebraska has a viable and growing poultry industry," says Dr. Earl Gleeves, extension poultry specialist at the University of Nebraska.

Dr. Glenn Froning, newly appointed chairman of the NU poultry department, and his staff acknowledged that great changes have taken place in the industry and are striving to gear up the department to meet the challenges.

One key research area is seeking to improve egg shell quality. Mechanized hen houses apparently are hard on eggs, cracking the shells resulting in large losses and poor quality.

Handling Methods Studied

In addition to seeking ways to produce eggs with stronger shells, department personnel are studying egg handling methods to see if the answer to the problem lies there.

"We find that many produce people should throw away their old egg cases long before they do," Froning said. "Those battered cases don't provide the kind of support that eggs need."

"We also have discovered that machines that gather and pack eggs are often out of adjustment creating conditions that lead to cracking or breaking eggs."

"The old problems of infrequent gathering of eggs and inadequate amounts of nesting materials are also factors in egg shell problems," he said.

Dr. Gleeves pointed out that there are still a lot of small flocks in Nebraska, although not nearly as many as there were 20 years ago.

20,000 Farms

"There are still 20,000 farms in the state that have one or more chickens," Gleeves said. "There are many small flocks that are supplying the family and a few friends with eggs."

"We also have around 200 farms that have in excess of 1,000 birds and we have 4 farms that have more than 1 million birds. Perhaps 60 farms have in excess of 10,000 birds."

The county agent who once provided lessons in how to cull unproductive birds and helped 4-H youngsters get a flock started is dropping out of the poultry production picture.

"Extension assistance to poultry flock owners is becoming a situation where the department staff is working directly with the producer," Gleeves explained.

A connecting link between the industry and the university is the director of Nebraska Poultry Industries Inc., Doyle Free, who is housed at the poultry department in Lincoln.

Nebraska has 4,483,000 hens and about 1 million turkeys, according to department estimates. "They eat some 45 million pounds of feed in addition to the 20 lbs. per pullet raised," Froning said.

The economic impact of the laying hens in the state can be measured by economists who estimate that for every 100,000 hens, there is a spinoff of $1,300,000 in additional economic activity.

Not All Large

Not all the poultrymen in the state are large. The department is also trying to develop 4-H projects based on small flocks.

"There is a demand for some kind of livestock project for the 4-H member that doesn't require a huge investment," Gleeves said.

Marketing for such small flocks is becoming a problem with the disappearance of small produce houses that used to process small lots of birds and buy eggs at a case at a time.

"Usually they have to seek some kind of a local market but many of them are successful," Gleeves said.

Rabbits too come under the department's efforts to aid youngsters in finding a project to take to the fair.

"I guess we got the rabbits because they tend to fit into a poultry cage at a fair and the animal science people are more interested in big animals like hogs and cattle," Gleeves speculated.

Gleeves, Froning and Free feel that poor management is a big factor in the decline of poultry farmers. They are applying the term to the entire industry all the way from the hatchery to the plate.

"Farmers need to pay more attention to their birds, do a better job of caring for them, build a better house that is adequately ventilated and keep it clean."

Better Job Needed

Produce people need to do a better job of handling birds and eggs, they need to use good equipment and finally the industry needs a better marketing program and some new products to sell.

Free points to increased sales of turkeys by using new products such as a turkey roast, turkey roll, etc.

New products being tried by the department include new snack foods using eggs to increase the protein in the product.

"We are hopeful that labeling requirements will lead to the snack food industry producing products that have a greater nutritional value. This could provide a good market for eggs," Froning said.

3 Persons Killed In Traffic Mishaps

From Press Dispatches

Three persons were killed in weekend traffic accidents in Nebraska.

The latest reported victim was Jerry L. Burmood, 20, Route 1, Wood River.

Burmood was killed early Sunday in a one-car accident two miles west of Shelton on U.S. 30. The State Patrol said his car was passing another vehicle when it went out of control and skidded into a ditch. Burmood was alone in the vehicle.

Ralph Vance, 22, Valley, was killed late Saturday night in a two-car crash in Douglas County at the intersection of U.S. 275 and a county road.

Vance was a passenger in a car driven by Stephen L. Langle of Omaha. The patrol said the Langle car was involved in a collision with a car driven by Larry G. McLaughlin of Bellevue. Langle and McLaughlin were hospitalized.

A pickup truck crash late Saturday 10 miles southeast of Hebron claimed the life of Lawrence Hergott, 64, prominent Hebron farmer and businessman.

The patrol said Hergott was driving the pickup when it was involved in a collision with a car driven by Douglas K. Kewitz of Longview, Wash., who was visiting relatives in the area.

Kewitz suffered a broken nose and bruise.

The three weekend deaths, together with one which occurred Friday, brought the statewide highway death toll to 458, compared to 465 a year ago.

In the Friday accident Alvin L. Sklenar, 51, of Ryeview was killed in a one vehicle accident northwest of Grand Island. He was thrown from his pickup truck when it turned over on State Highway No. 2.

More Negro Families Earning Over $10,000

Omaha (AP) — A study indicates that the number of Omaha-area black families with income of $10,000 or more nearly tripled during the 1960s.

A University of Nebraska at Omaha study shows that 1,865 area Negro families, or 12%, had incomes that high in 1969, compared with 669 black families for 11% of the Negro family total in 1959.

Despite the gain, the study shows that Negro families earned less compared to the general population in 1969 than in 1959.

The director of the UNO Center for Applied Research study of local black income patterns Ralph Todd said the trend is contrary to the national pattern.

Todd said according to census data, Negro families in the Omaha area in 1969 earned 63% as much as the general population, compared to 68% in 1959.

The study showed that the median income of black families in 1969 was $6,451, compared to the $10,204 median income of all families, including Negro.

Negroes made up about 6% of the Omaha area's population in 1969, Todd said or an increase of about 1% in 10 years.

Omaha (AP) — The Nebraska chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union canceled a planned annual meeting because of a lack of response, spokesmen said. Feed Grain Uncertainties May Lead To Seller's Market

Uncertainties about the supply-demand status of U.S. feed grains, the eventual size of this year's feed grain carryover, and the amount of these grains on hand at the end of the 1972-73 winter season leave the grain producer with a strong possibility of a seller's market during the coming months, according to a University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension economist.

Dr. Allen C. Wellman says that one of the factors contributing to the uncertainty is the smaller volume of wheat which will be fed to livestock this winter in the U.S.

"Domestic feed grain use will gain about three per cent because livestock numbers are up and also because higher wheat prices have erased any advantage in feeding wheat rather than feed grains to animals," he said.

However, Wellman added, increasing export demand for feed grains will reduce the price spread between these grains and wheat, resulting in one of two things — either belt-tightening by feeders or higher prices for livestock.

Feed grain exports are bound to increase in the next few months, Wellman predicted, and continued strong wheat export activity are also forecast. The delicate balance between U.S. supplies and foreign demand can create a situation where each grain acts as a lever to force upward market prices of other grains, or at least prevent price declines. This balance, Wellman said, is an important factor in the uncertainty which surrounds feed grain status today.

In late September, the USDA forecast the feed grain supply for the 1972-73 marketing year to be about 237 million tons, slightly below last year's record volume. Production, forecast at 189 million tons, is 16 million tons below last year. From this must come not only increased domestic use, but a hike in export sales of at least 10%.

Russia, of course, has been a giant importer of U.S. grain this year. There are other traditional customers for U.S. grains, too, and while all of these customers also buy grain from countries other than the U.S., they may lose this option this winter, Wellman noted. The status of crops below the equator and fall planting in Russia looks dismal at this time.

Australian wheat production may be down as much as 25%. Argentina has prospects for a poor harvest and has already heavy export commitments. As much as 50% of Brazil's wheat crop may be lost. In Russia, Wellman said, the poor crop prospects are intensified by the recent growth of livestock numbers.

The U.S. and Canada have the world's only big stockpiles of grain. Canada is primarily interested in selling wheat and will give the U.S. competition in this area. The U.S. however, has a carryover of feed grains for sale — about 500 million bushels — and the prospects are good though not certain, that grain producers will some day look back on 1972 as a very good year.

Animal Health is considering ways of validating Nebraska swine. One of the methods discussed would provide for testing of all animals in a herd. If the animals were all negative, the herd could be validated as brucellosis-free. Thereafter, testing of 20% of the animals annually with tests remaining negative, would keep the validation in effect.

The committee is considering proposed legislation tightening brucellosis control regulations in swine which would be introduced during the 1973 session of the Legislature.

Swine Industry Moving Towards Tighter Laws

A California law which requires that all pork shipped into the state come from certified brucellosis-free herds, goes into effect Jan. 1 and has the Nebraska swine industry moving toward some strengthening of Nebraska's brucellosis laws.

Dr. Marvin J. Twiehaus, chairman of the University of Nebraska Veterinary Science Department, said the new California regulations will affect a large volume of Nebraska pork exports. And, though the actual incidence of brucellosis is very low, Nebraska swine producers will need some proof to hang onto the California market, Dr. Twiehaus noted.

Weekly Grain Report

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

A sharp, but probably temporary, price rise in the farm price of feed grains and milo have been a delightful experience for those who managed to deliver grain to the elevators this past week.

It is particularly frustrating for those who have grain harvested but cannot dry it because they lack fuel to run the grain dryer. If the grain can be sold now, the improved price will do much to reduce the size of the economic disaster resulting from the recent storm.

The price rise is due to a number of factors. The pipeline from the farm to the consumer has some bare spots because of a cutback in harvesting activity over a wide area of the United States.

The lack of an accumulated inventory has left some grain dealers without grain to deliver promised deliveries forcing them to bid for already tight supplies.

Farmers seldom sell on a rising market even when they do have the grain in stock. A sort of panic based on weather problems has forced grain users into the market and has encouraged farmers to hold on to their grain for an even better price.

Grain holders should be reminded that the expected carryover is close to a billion bushels. Improved prices could make having a government program can profitable.

Corn prices will remain above last year for the foreseeable future but are unlikely to remain at present levels indefinitely.

Spotlight on Agriculture

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

One of the things that bothered me about the Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association meeting in South Sioux City, was the sad fact that only 20 voting members stayed for the session on resolutions.

To keep the thing in perspective I recognize that the resolutions were prepared by knowledgeable committees that did have pretty good attendance. I am also fairly sure that the resolutions the group passed represent the thinking of the bulk of the 4,103-member association.

Farmers need to keep in mind, however, that the time-tested way to control a union, political party or farm organization is to stay to the last and vote your ideas into the group's resolutions and into its bylaws.

If you belong to an organization you have to participate in it or it may not represent you accurately.

The unfinished harvesting and the lousy weather made it impossible for most of the feeders to make it to their meeting, but farmers need to recognize that they can't have an effective farm organization without participating in its deliberations.

Feeders who receive CALF trace publication are chuckling over the nomination of Wisconsin Senator William Proxmire as member of the year for his opposition to feed additives in the feed of the nation's meat animals.

Proxmire wants to eliminate all growth stimulants and antibiotics from livestock rations. Feeders are painfully aware that this will make it more difficult and more expensive to produce meat. They fear an adverse reaction from consumers when the price of meat increases, as it must, if the industry is to exist under Proxmire's rules.

Eddie Collins, the fast talking radio farm announcer from Red Oak, Iowa, is on a nationwide tour with Big Mac, the black steer that gradually turned white after the Denver Livestock Show.

Collins is receiving help with his promotional effort from a number of livestock groups. The big steer is docile and seems to be a good ambassador to the non farm world.

Collins, who is usually sharply critical of most everyone in government, is calling Big Mac the sire of the phantom herd of cattle he says exists only in the mind of U.S. Department of Agriculture statisticians.

People wondering how the Russians are paying for the grain they are buying from us can relax. Most of the grain is being paid for in dollars.

These are mostly dollars that have been in Europe for some years, spent by American servicemen there and for products imported from European countries.

The Russians have been accumulating them for years in trading agreements with nations on the continent.

There is also some evidence that they have been selling gold to speculators in Europe, which tends to make dollars cheap at times.

While this does cut the cost of the grain to the Russians, who seem to be among the world's best businessmen, it also has the effect of strengthening the American dollar because it brings them back home where they belong.

The Russians have a credit arrangement but they haven't used it very much. This has led to speculation in the grain trade that they may be planning other purchases in the coming year.

The problem of how to operate the Farmers Home Administration with no additional people but with additional projects related to rural development remains, in the opinion of this reporter, unsolved.

Agriculture Secretary Buttz has suggested that perhaps the FHA will have to farm out some of its jobs primarily hiring local lawyers to check leases and loan arrangements. Possibly farm management specialists could be retained to assist low income farmers in marketing their products.

Clearly something will have to be done to streamline the work of the agency if it is to function in the very much that many bureaucrats work under than FHA people do. The agency is a liability for being too big. You get 24 hours a day and the office is overworked and understaffed. By the way, the FHA office in Omaha has been so busy that the husband of the

Japanese Custom Brings Year-End Problems

Tokyo (AP) — A recent earthquake toppled these things in a small room of one suburban home:

Forty-two cans of sea-weed, a Japanese dining delicacy; 34 bottles of the rice wine called sake, 33 whisky gift sets, 21 cases of beer, 11 boxes of cheese and fruit, nine tailor-made shirts, and a store of household products such as soaps, detergents and fabrics.

"It looked like an alpine avalanche," said the wife of a senior Japanese bureaucrat as she set about to restore order. It also pointed up what goes on during Oseibo, the year-end gift season.

December brings Christmas Japan, in its own local fashion, with trees, Santa Claus and carols. For many businessmen, officials, government and office workers and others, it also brings the time of the traditional year-end gift. These are sent to relatives, company superiors, business clients and friends as an expression of thanks for kindnesses, hospitality, business contacts and friendship extended during the year.

The Department Store Association said total sales in Japan's 218 major stores in December will be more than double usual monthly totals. About 35% of the sales are for gifts.

Sounds great, doesn't it? Well, one 45-year-old wife, whose husband was promoted recently to a senior position, said: "I am scared with so many gifts... Many of these presents came from subordinates of my husband. Just receiving them with no return would be bribery, I am afraid. So I decided to buy return gifts. But a government employee like my husband can't afford to buy so many gifts."

She also had other complaints:

"Because of so many gifts of whisky and sake, my husband became a heavy drinker. And that is not all; my son is complaining of the gifts which turned his room into a warehouse."

The wife of a young officer worker added her misgivings:

"We worry our head off about what kind of gifts we should send because we must choose the best goods no matter what the price is, to please the receivers. For example, my husband's superior favors only a foreign-made expensive whisky."

In government-owned apartments, where hundreds of families live, one family receives many gifts while another gets none.

The wife of a factory worker complained: "My 4-year-old asked me why we don't receive any gifts... because daddy hasn't any friends?"

A survey conducted by the newspaper Sankai said about half the people it contacted favored the seasonal giving as a good custom, helpful in expressing gratitude. It said 13 to 14% claimed gifts have merit in maintaining good relations with others, while about 30% disapproved of the custom.

A department store listed the most popular gift this year as canned seaweed, followed by cheese and butter, foreign-made tea and soap. The average cost of each gift was around 3,000 yen, just under $10.

Upper New England Faces Development Boom

By The New York Times
(c) New York Times News
Montpelier, Vt. — That "little place in the country" may become a fading dream for many urban residents as a result of the explosive pressure for development that has focused on the upper New England states.

level, a reaction that promises to severely limit the continued development of the land is settling in.
The growing demand for land and building sites in Vermont is leading toward a confrontation between the traditional concept of private property and the need for controlled development.
Major New Program
The 1973 Vermont legislature will be asked to consider a major new program of land control that includes a statewide assessment of the land's ability to carry development and a land-use plan that would designate areas for specific kinds of development.

Public hearings on the proposals have already generated violent opposition from large landholders and real estate interests, and the plan is expected to be one of the most controversial pieces of legislation ever considered by the state.
William S. Cowles Jr., Vermont's secretary of human services, whose department developed the proposed legislation, says the controls are necessary to ease the pressure for development.
Although Vermont's growing pains have been most acute — and the state's reaction more rapid — there appears to be a general trend toward growth control in the New England states as pressure for industrial, recreational and residential development builds.

Growing Trend
In eastern Massachusetts there has been a growing trend by local governments to slow down or arrest growth that is tending to destroy the rural flavor of their communities.
In the last few years a half dozen towns have placed tight restrictions on building permits, and some have imposed a ban on multifamily construction in the face of a spreading pattern of suburban and rural apartment building.

The town of Plymouth — experiencing a population growth from 5,000 to 22,000 in the last two years — recently enacted zoning regulations designed to "retain the rural character of the town" and will soon consider a two-year moratorium on all building.

New Hampshire planners are faced with a different problem. It is one of the few New England states that has little control over mobile homes, and pressure is growing to limit the use of house trailers.

Since 1960 the use of mobile homes in the state has grown from 1,200 units to more than 15,000 today, and most of them are clustered in parks on the edges of towns and villages of the southern part of the state. Efforts are underway by some members of the legislature to draft a model law on the use and location of mobile homes for the state.

Israel Charged With Reign Of Terror

London (AP) — A British organization charged Monday that Israel has tortured many prisoners in a reign of terror waged against Palestinians in Arab territory occupied in the 1967 Middle East war.

The Union of Liberal Students — an offshoot of the Young Liberals, the youth wing of Britain's Liberal party — alleged in a report that 4,000 Palestinians had been jailed and another 10,000 held without trial in "administrative detention" since the 1967 conflict.

An Israeli Defense Ministry spokesman in Tel Aviv called the charges "ridiculous" and "concentration camp stories — they don't exist here." He dismissed the report as "something compiled by a group of students . . . too absurd to argue with."

The union claimed 890 Palestinians had been deported by the Israelis from the occupied zones and 11,000 displaced or evicted from their homes.

The union accused the Israelis of torturing prisoners by stripping them naked for long periods, using electric shock treatment on them and burning them with cigarettes.

The report also alleged prisoners were beaten, hung by their hands for long periods and soaked in cold water during chilly nights.

The report cited evidence for its charges from the Jerusalem-based Israeli League for Human Rights, the United Nations, the International Red Cross, the British press and Amnesty International, an independent London-based group that seeks the release of political prisoners.

"The blatant political repression which exists under Israeli rule in the occupied territories is documented with case histories of Palestinian Arabs who have come up against the true face of Zionism," the report's introduction said.

The Israeli Defense Ministry spokesman countered that "the administered territories are open to all foreign journalists, and no one who has visited there has ever reported such foolishness."

Another Israeli official said: "It is true we have jailed people, and deported some, and we blew up houses. But the figures given in that report are nonsensically exaggerated, and the torture stories are simply without foundation."

Gene Jordan Re-Elected Head

The re-election of Gene Jordan of Omaha as chairman highlighted the annual election of officers of the State Board of Public Roads Classifications and Standards, held Friday at the State Department of Roads offices here.

In other board action Bruce C. Gillan of Lincoln was elected vice-chairman and Carroll J. Story, also of Lincoln, was re-appointed as secretary.

Jordan, the Director of Public Works for Omaha, was named to his second term as head of the 11-man board.

Voluntary Aid For Wesleyan Reaches $997,389 For Year

Voluntary support of Nebraska Wesleyan for the last fiscal year ending May 31 reached $997,389, according to Charles E. Sconyers, vice president for development.

The support included $438,993 for current operations and $558,396 for capital purposes, Sconyers said. The figures are contained in a Survey of Voluntary Support of Education conducted by the Council for Financial Aid to Education, The American Alumni Council, and the National Association of Independent Schools.

Corporations and business concerns provided $199,000 of the current support and $39,450 of the capital support for a total of $294,981, Sconyers said. The United Methodist Church provided $83,767, all for current operations; Alumni provided $31,000 for current and $84,000 for capital purposes, and other friends and foundations provided $120,000 for current operations, and $434,000 for capital purposes, Sconyers said.

The report also indicates the college has a total value of plant and endowment of $15,206,707, up from last year's reported figure of $14,600,000, Sconyers said.

Bellevue H.S. Wins Annual Debate Meet

Omaha (AP) — Bellevue High School won the sweepstakes trophy in the 22-school field at the ninth annual University of Nebraska at Omaha forensics tournament Friday and Saturday.

The trophy went to the school which accumulated the most points, with victories in debate and individual events among schools from Nebraska and Iowa. Omaha Gross High School was second and Omaha Westside placed third.

Individual winners included:

A Division Debate: Sioux City, Iowa West team of David Pecaut and Robin Reher, first; Gross, second.

B Division Debate: Gross, first, and Central second.

Dramatic Interpretation: Sule Wurtz of Westside, first, and Sharon Swones of Bellevue, second.

Dual acting: Randy Pflug and Scott McQuinn of Omaha Westside, first; and David City Aquinas second.

Individual Oratory: Richard Miller of Des Moines East, first, and Carol Hollerman of Omaha Holy Name, second.

Extemporaneous speaking: Beckv Powers of Westside, first, and Rich Williams of Holy Name, second.

Omaha Firms To Face Sewer Fee Increases

Omaha (AP) — Two sewer use fee increases will face Omaha industries during the next two years.

The first — probably in 1973 — will raise rates enough to pay industries' share of the cost of treating the sewage they produce. Finance Director Edwin Hewitt said there also is a chance home owners will be affected.

The second increase would help reimburse the federal government for part of the grants it makes to the city to build treatment facilities.

The city would collect the second increase and turn half of it over to the government, keeping the other half for reconstruction and expansion costs. Home owners would not be affected.

52,000 Receive Food Stamp Aid In Nebraska

Chicago (UPI) — Nearly 52,000 Nebraskans received aid through the food stamp program during October, according to Dennis M. Doyle, Midwest regional administrator of the U.S. Agriculture Department's Food and Nutrition Service.

Doyle reported the number of low-income persons participating in the program showed little change from a year ago, according to the preliminary figures available.

Participants in 87 projects paid about $576,000 for food stamps valued at almost $125 million, Doyle said.

UNO Has No Plans To Reduce Staff

Omaha (AP) — There are no plans to reduce the staff despite a need by the University of Nebraska at Omaha to solve a $432,000 financial problem by July 1.

Chancellor Ronald Roskens said the deficit is due to a new state law that allows more students to qualify for low, non-resident tuition and a hard-to-explain trend in which students are paying less tuition because they are taking fewer courses.

He said that tuition paying revenue also has been complicated by unforeseen changes in the number of graduate students compared to undergraduates and year-to-year variations in charges for credit hours.

He said administrators are uncertain why student trends develop in what now appears to be a nationwide pattern affecting all university budgets.

The school has submitted a budget request of $14 million for the coming year.

MLEA Honors Five Including 2 Kearney Men

Omaha (AP) — The Metro Law Enforcement Agency has honored five persons, including two men from Kearney.

Patrolmen honored in Omaha were Steve Atenhan and Ed Akins, both of the Kearney Police Department. They were credited with getting three elderly men out of a boarding house fire in which several died.

Douglas County Deputy Sheriff William Bosanek of Omaha, a radio operator, was honored Friday night for directing rescuers to a home where two persons had been overcome by carbon monoxide last January.

State Patrol Sgt. Robert Buchholz of Bellevue was cited for setting up a training program used by suburban police departments, and La Vista Police Chief Dave Davenport for his years "of dedicated work" in the department.

Make your money make you money.

Save now at NBC.

Maybe you try to save $50 each month, or you might have $1,000 that should be earning top interest. Well, the National Bank of Commerce has a savings plan that fits your particular savings needs.

Though each plan is different, they do have several important things in common. At NBC, your savings dollar will earn you the highest amount of interest the law allows. And each of our savings plans is compounded quarterly, so that you earn interest on your interest. AND your savings are safe, insured up to $20,000 by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Below are lots more good reasons why, whatever NBC savings plan you choose, your money will make you money.

ThriftiSave

A very flexible savings plan.

ThriftiSave is designed to be as flexible and mobile as you are. You can open a ThriftiSave account with any amount. You can deposit or withdraw as much as you like . . . whenever you like. And your interest earns from the day of deposit to the day of withdrawal. No "save by the 10th to earn from the 1st" with ThriftiSave. As soon as you make a deposit, your money starts making you money.

With ThriftiSave, your savings earn 4½% annually. Twice each year you'll receive a savings statement which reflects all your deposits and withdrawals, and all the interest your savings have earned.

Diamond Passbook

A higher rate of interest

A great way to save. The Diamond Passbook plan allows you the flexibility of adding to your savings any amount at any time, and still pays a high rate of interest. It guarantees you 5% per year. You can open a Diamond Passbook account for as little as $100. Withdrawals can be made at the end of each quarter. (March, June, September, December). With this special high paying plan, you can withdraw only those funds which have been in your account for at least three months by the end of the quarter.

Time Certificates of Deposit

5%, 5½%, or 5¾%

Three easy ways to save — bringing you the highest return for your money. For a minimum of only $50 you may purchase a time certificate of deposit. Certificates of deposit, (we call them CD's), assures us that your money will remain in savings for a specified amount of time. For that guarantee, we can make your money make you more money. The amount of interest paid depends on the type of CD you purchase. A three month CD earns an interest rate of 5% per year. A one year CD earns 5½%, a two year CD earns 5¾% annually. A CD can be purchased at any time, and can be withdrawn during the 10 day grace period at the end of the term.

What do doctors recommend for patients in pain?

Doctors all over the country dispense over 50,000,000 of these tablets to their patients each year.

There are many medications a physician or dentist can prescribe for pain. Some are narcotics, many are available only on prescription. But there is one pain reliever, available without prescription, doctors dispense again and again. Anacin.

Each year, doctors give over 50,000,000 Anacin tablets to their patients in pain. If doctors think enough about Anacin to dispense all these tablets, what better recommendation can you ask when you are in pain?

You see, Anacin contains more of the pain reliever doctors recommend most than any other leading tablet.

Headache and dental pain is relieved incredibly fast. Minor pains of arthritis are dependably eased for hours, even the aches and pains of colds and flu respond to Anacin. So the tension and depression that can be caused by such pain will be relieved too. And millions take Anacin without stomach upset.

When you're in pain, why don't you follow the practice of so many doctors and take the tablet a doctor might give you in his own office. Take Anacin.

17-Year-Old Boy Gets Patent For One Candle Kit On Birthday Cakes

The New York Times

Washington — A 14-year-old boy invented a single way to show his father's age on a birthday cake. He managed to do it with one candle displaying three colors.

John Henry Kumm, now 17 and a high school senior in Severna Park, Md., will be granted patent 3,706,523 this week for the one-candle device, which is called Resistage.

Three years ago, when the invention was made, the boy's father William Kumm, was 39. Instead of using 39 candles or spelling out the number, the inventor drew on the International electronic component code found on resistors in radios and television sets. He had run across the code while putting together a radio delivered in kit form.

John used three color bands on the candle. At the top was orange, the code color for three, then white for nine, and last black, meaning that was all.

The father is serving here in the Commerce Department's maritime administration, having been borrowed from the Westinghouse Electric Corporation under the presidential interchange of executives from industry. He has five patents of his own.

If the young inventor licenses somebody to produce the Resistage (a name adopted as referring to resistors and resistance to advancing age), it can be supplied with colored strips to go around the candle and a copy of the component.

Demand For French Napoleons Hikes Value

•The New York Times

Paris — "It is the traditional refuge for the little guy when he is scared," the trader said as the feverish demand for Napoleons, those dime-sized gold coins costly sitting under so many French mattresses, lifted the price again to a new high.

Napoleons are worth no more than $6.20, valued on the basis of a gold content of 5.806 grams. But they were worth a lot more Friday — $16 — when the trading had to stop in the gold room of the stock exchange.

That means the price rose to 80 francs. Two months ago it was 70 francs. A week ago it was 75 francs. Ten years ago it was 40 francs.

The Napoleon is the French Dow-Jones. Both are confidence barometers. But they act in opposite ways. The price for Napoleons rise when confidence is on the wane.

What sent the price up this week was the public opinion poll published last Monday showing great strength for the Communist-Socialist coalition organized to fight the Gaullists in the General Assembly elections next March.

The Gaullists have been in power for the last 14 years. Although the complexion of the assembly could change, Georges Pompidou's term as president lasts until 1975.

The poll, which showed the Left getting 45% of the vote against only 38% for the Gaullists and their allies, was also responsible for a sharp weakening of the French franc on the currency exchange markets.

The rate is now a little more than five francs for the dollar—5.69 francs in the foreign exchange market for commercial francs today—against only 4.75 some six months ago.

There has been the beginning of a flight of money to havens in Switzerland, some bankers report.

Pittsburgh (AP) — Aluminum customers can look for higher prices next year, says John D. Harper, chairman of the Aluminum Co. of America (Alcoa).

7 Ways You Can Save Money On Heating Costs This Winter

You can REDUCE your costs for heat and INCREASE your personal comfort by following these suggestions:

1 Tight-fitting storm windows will materially reduce heat loss and cold air infiltration through the windows of your house.

2 Caulk and weatherstrip around windows and doors and seal cracks to eliminate loss of heat and infiltration of cold air.

3 Install overhead and sidewall insulation to substantially reduce your winter heating bills.

4 Set the thermostat at your comfort level and leave it...keeping in mind that costs rise significantly for every degree your thermostat setting is increased.

5 Check the heat outlets to make sure they're not blocked by furniture or draperies.

6 Make sure your furnace is in top operating condition and filters are changed regularly. Have a qualified serviceman check your heating equipment regularly.

7 When your fireplace is not being used, be sure the damper is closed.

Each of these suggestions will save you money, conserve on energy and materially increase the comfort level of your home.

An Unhappy Duck Season

The closing of a hunting season is always one of the things sportsmen dread, but this year it was a combination of a blessing and the end of a period of frustration for Dan (Buck) Adams.

Adams, who has hunted ducks in Nebraska for the "past 49 years" was both happy (after a fashion) and sad when the duck season closed over the weekend in the East.

The reason? Simple. Adams, for the first time "since I can remember" had gone without a duck throughout the entire season.

"I don't know what went wrong," he says disgustedly. "I tried everything I know (and believe me I know quite a few tricks) but it seemed like everywhere I was the ducks weren't."

"I'd hunt the lakes and the ducks would be on the rivers. I'd try farm ponds and they wouldn't light but would fly into fields. I'd try the rivers and they'd sit on some — lake. I guess my luck just finally ran out."

There were a few lose calls, but Adams says something would always happen to drive the ducks away.

"One time around the start of the season I was hunkered down with Jolly (his Springer spaniel) in a bunch of weeds on a sand bar right smack in the middle of the Platte," he explains.

"It was early morning, the fog hadn't even lifted all the way, my decoys were out and I could see them flying out of the northwest," he continues.

"I started calling and those ducks wheeled just as pretty as could be and started to glide on in when some fool opened up when they were still a good hundred feet out of range and scared them off," Adams says with a sigh. "I think I could've probably picked off one coming and another going. Mallards they was too."

Another time, Adams was hunting on Branched Oak Lake when a flock came in and landed about a hundred feet away from his blind and decoys.

"I started calling them real soft," Adams continues. "Just like a bunch of feeding ducks and they start swimming towards my decoys."

"But before they can come to me, they have to pass by a little point that sticks out about fifty feet on the west side of the lake."

"Those guys must've been lying flat there an awful long time waiting for something like that, because as soon as they got into range, they jumped up and collected three of them," he says. "But I got one little bit of satisfaction out of it all. One of those guys shot a red-head and the warden nabbed him."

Pheasant Season Different

Now Adams says he will concentrate on pheasants for the remainder of the hunting season.

"I like to hunt those ringnecks," he says. "But my legs get kinda tired from all that walking. That's an awful lot of walking for a man my age."

"That's why I like hunting ducks. There's not as much walking needed for them," he offers.

"How old am I? Why son, I'm old enough to be your grandfather."

How old is that?

"None of your business. Just say I'm over sixty and let it go at that."

—BLACKS VOW PICKETING—

Liberty Bowl To Pit ISU, Georgia Tech

Memphis, Tenn. (UPI) — Iowa State, battling to end a five-game winless streak, and Georgia Tech, the nation's winningest bowl team, tangle Monday night in the Liberty Bowl, with blacks vowing to picket the college football post-season event.

A capacity crowd of 50,000 is expected in Memphis Memorial Stadium for the 9 p.m. EST kickoff that could be marred by National Association for the Advancement of Colored People protests over the suspension of Tech's Eddie McAshan, the first black quarterback at a major college in the deep South.

McAshan, a senior who owns most of Tech's passing records, was suspended by Coach Bill Fulcher for missing practice before Tech's regular season finale with Georgia.

The suspension vaulted junior college transfer Jim Stevens into the spotlight after having played in only one game this year. Stevens passed for more than 200 yards but Tech still fell to Georgia 27-7. "Stevens has worked hard and is more mentally ready for this game than Georgia," Fulcher said. "We've settled on our game plan. Now it's just a matter of execution."

While Tech faced the McAshan controversy, Iowa State also underwent criticism for landing a bowl bid with a 500 record.

"We'll show everybody Monday if we deserve a bowl bid," said Cyclone quarterback George Amundson, fourth nationally in total offense with more than 2,300 yards.

The Cyclones have not won since drubbing Kansas 34-8 at mid-season, but did battle defending national champion Nebraska to a 23-23 draw. Iowa State lost two games after accepting the Liberty Bowl invitation.

Tech is making its 21st bowl appearance, having won 13 — one more than Southern California and Alabama, each awaiting New Year's Day bowl games.

The Jacket attack will be geared to the passing game with Stevens throwing to sophomore ace Jim Robinson, who caught 48 for 812 yards and nine touchdowns, and Mike Owen, who grabbed 25 for 355 yards.

Iowa State's attack also features the Big 8 Conference rushing champion, Mike Strachan, who had 1,260 yards. Greg Horne, McAshan's roommate, is Tech's top runner with 558 yards.

OB Festival Offers More Than A Football Game

(First of a Series)

Miami, Fla. — It may be called the Orange Bowl Festival, but Miami's most famous holiday event promises to provide three weeks of activities with orange just one of many colors to be seen.

The 39th annual Orange Bowl Classic, Dec. 16-Jan. 7, will be another spectacle of color as players in bright uniforms, cheerleaders, bands, officials and a host of others bring the dazzle that has long been connected with Earnie Seiler's productions.

After 30 minutes of football, supplied by two of the nation's best teams, Seiler will unveil to the more than 80,000 spectators and millions of television viewers one of his unequal half-time shows.

Two parades contribute a palette full of hues to Miami's rainbow of activities and visitors can be sure of finding a treasure waiting at its end.

The King Orange Jamboree, Dec. 30, is unique. As a night parade it can utilize lighting to enhance the already colorful floats and this year's theme "Land of Dreams" has given the Orange Bowl Committee free reign in bringing men's wildest dreams to life.

Another colorful pageant is the Junior Orange Bowl Parade Dec. 28 with the theme "Imagine, Just for a Moment." The parade, staged by young people from Miami and the nation, is always a kaleidoscope of sights and sounds.

The nation's four top college soccer teams collide in the Orange Bowl Dec. 27 for the semifinals of the National Collegiate Athletic Association's championships. Winners will meet in the Dec. 29 finale.

Other Orange Bowl Festival sports events include the Junior Orange Bowl Bowling Tournament, Dec. 16-17; Junior Orange Bowl Tennis Tournament, Dec. 22-25; Ninth Junior Orange Bowl International Golf Championship, Dec. 26-29, and Orange Bowl International Tennis Tournament, Dec. 26-30.

Top women golfers of the Ladies Professional Golf Association tackle Doral Country Club's tough course in the Burdine's Tournament, Jan. 3-7.

The Orange Bowl Festival has been attracting millions of visitors to Miami since its beginning as the Palm Festival in 1933 when 3,500 cheered the University of Miami's 7-0 victory over Manhattan.

The first official Orange Bowl game matched Bucknell against the University of Miami in 1935 as 5,134 people turned up to see the game in the new wooden stadium.

Miami's King Orange Jamboree started with 30 floats on the morning of the 1936 Orange Bowl game and has been growing ever since to become the largest nighttime parade in the nation.

A crowd of 78,151 witnessed the 1972 classic as the national champion Nebraska Cornhuskers defeated the Alabama Crimson Tide, but because of different seating configuration the crowd did not match the 1971 game record attendance of 80,699 for a Nebraska-Louisiana State battle.

STEELERS FINALLY CHAMPS

. . . Miami Ends Unbeaten

By Associated Press

After 40 years, the Pittsburgh Steelers are finally champions — of the American Conference's Central Division in the National Football League. They did it Sunday with a 24-2 victory over San Diego.

The Steelers, playing with the knowledge that Cleveland had already beaten the New York Jets 26-10, knew full well the divisional title. But by the half, it was obvious Pittsburgh wasn't going to let the Browns sneak in through the back door and grab the crown.

A loss by the Steelers would have tied them with Cleveland, by virtue of a better record against Central Division foes, would have won the title and the coveted home-field advantage in next weekend's playoffs.

Instead, the Steelers, with an 11-3 record, the best in their history, have the home field and will host AFC West winner Oakland next Saturday while the Browns, as the conference's "wild card" team, must face the unbeaten, untied Dolphins in Miami on Sunday.

The Dolphins made it a perfect season Saturday with a 16-0 victory over Baltimore. A few hours later, the San Francisco 49ers won the National Conference West championship with a last-minute 20-17 victory over Minnesota.

In next weekend's NFC playoffs, the 49ers will host Dallas' "wild card" Cowboys on Saturday and Green Bay will be at Washington on Sunday.

In the rest of the regular-season finals on Sunday Oakland beat Chicago 28-21. Buffalo defeated Washington, Cincinnati mauled Houston 61-17, Green Bay downed New Orleans 30-20, Kansas City edged Atlanta 17-14, St. Louis nipped Philadelphia 24-23, Detroit clayed Los Angeles 34-17, the New York Giants silenced Dallas 23-3 and Denver drubbed New England 45-21.

The Steelers got their touchdowns on two-yard runs by Franco Harris and John Fuqua and Terry Bradshaw's 17-yard pass to Ron Shanklin—but it was the defense that really did the job.

Tackle Joe Greene and linebackers Andy Russell and Jack Ham led a relentless rush that forced John Hadl into throwing four intercepted passes. The Chargers also coughed up three fumbles.

The Browns rode Mike Phipps' arm past the Jets. He fired two touchdowns to Frank Pitts in the second half, the first one an 80-yard play that broke a 10-10 tie.

Charlie Smith caught two touchdown passes for the Raiders, one apiece from Daryle Lamonia and Ken Stabler, and Clarence Davis ran 46 yards for a fourth-quarter score that kept the Bears at bay.

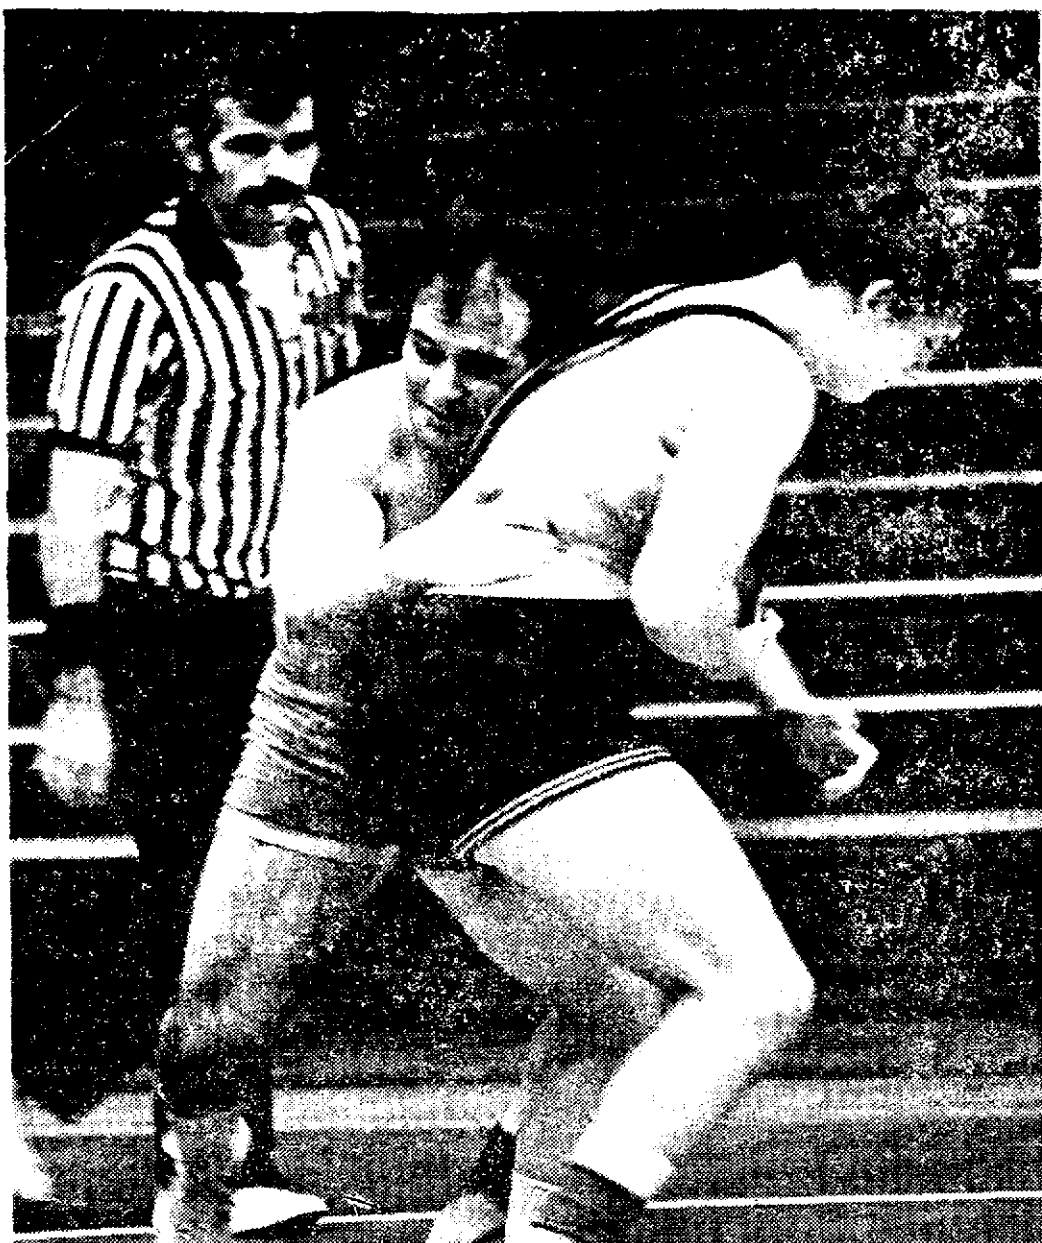

With Washington's Larry Brown benched for a second straight week by a slight injury, O.J. Simpson of the Bills grabbed the NFL rushing title with 1,251 yards. He piled up 101 of them against the playoff-bound Redskins to surpass Brown, who wound up with 1,216.

But it was interceptions by Alvin Wyatt and Dale Farley that paved the way to the Bills' victory. Wyatt picked off a Billy Kilmer pass and returned it 49 yards for a first-quarter touchdown. And with the score tied 17-17 in the fourth period, Farley snared another Kilmer pass and ran it back 42 yards to set up Jim Braxton's game-winning four-yard scoring run in the final minute.

The Bengals ran away from Houston after taking a slim 16-10 halftime lead. Cornerback Lemar Parrish tied a league record by returning two interceptions for touchdowns covering 25 and 33 yards and Neil Craig ran back another one 63 yards. Doug Dressler ran for three touchdowns and Horst Muhlmann kicked four field goals in the rout.

The Packers blocked New Orleans field goal and punt attempts and turned them into touchdowns—and even turned one of their own blocked kicks into touchdowns.

Willie Buchanan ran the blocked field goal 57 yards for one score and Richard Neal fell on the blocked punt in the end zone for another one. On Green Bay's bad news-turned-good news kick, holder Ron Widby recovered a blocked field goal attempt and passed to Ray Nitschke, a tight end on such plays. The 235-pound linebacker lumbered 34 yards to the Saints' seven, setting up Scott Hunter's scoring run. Ex-Nebraska star Jerry Tagge scored from two yards out later.

Heavyweight Wrestler Libal Excels In 'Acting'

. . . FORMER HUSKER STANDOUT'S THEATRICALS PRAISED BY NU MAT COACH BORGIALLI

By RANDY EICKHOFF
Star Sports Writer

An amateur wrestler needs four things going for him to be a champion . . . an endless knowledge of holds, philosophy, psychology, (to help shake up your opponent) and last but not least a sense of theatrics.

Gene Libal, ex-Nebraska heavyweight wrestling star, and now a teacher and wrestling coach at Battle Creek, has all these things going for him and, according to his former coach, Orval Borgialli, he excels in theatrics.

He's a good actor," Borgialli laughs. "He was probably one of the better actors I've had."

"When you're out on that mat, any way you can convince the referee that you're doing all the work, you can pick up one or two points that you ordinarily wouldn't get and that's what Gene does."

Libal put on a "show" for the crowd (and the referee) during the Great Plains AAU College Open Invitational wrestling championships during the freestyle competition Friday and "acted" his way to the championship in the heavyweight division.

"Of course, he has a lot more going for him than that," Borgialli says. "One of his greatest assets is his sense of balance. He's one of the better balanced wrestlers . . . it's awful hard to knock him off his feet."

Libal laughs when told of Borgialli's comments but readily admits that the holds he favors are crowd-pleasers.

"I think I like the salto or back suplay the best," he says. "Of course, you have to have great confidence in the effectiveness of that hold, speed, and absolutely no pity for your own body to use it. But it usually results in a pin."

While wrestling in Detroit, Libal knocked out two wrestlers with that hold and earned a pin over another. One of those he knocked out was the Canadian National champion.

"To use that hold, you have to get behind the other wrestler, get him around the hips, lock your hands on his hipbones, then completely sell yourself by throwing yourself backwards, arching him over you and onto his head and shoulders. The moment his shoulders touch the mat, that's a pin."

"You have to follow through with it to make it effective though, and that means you have to land on the mat with your forehead, keeping your own shoulders off the mat. That's where you've gotta have absolutely no pity for yourself to make it work," he explains.

Libal says his other favorite hold (actually a takedown) is "a Japanese whizzer."

"Here, you come to grips with the wrestler, grab his arm, spin in next to his body, then go into the suplay. If it's done right, then his forehead strikes the canvas and you're in a good position to maneuver for a pin."

The theatrics? They come in mainly during the Japanese whizzer. A loud "Yaaaaaah!" at the time of execution serves to help distract the opponent and draw the referee's attention to yourself. And, even if the hold fails, sometimes the referee is so impressed, he'll award a point actually unearned.

"Of course, sometimes that whizzer doesn't work right," Libal grins. "Last year, I tried it against Jeff Fern (300-pound heavyweight wrestler at Kearney State) with drastic results."

"I'm kinda short (5-10, 223) and I tried to put it on him while we were wrestling. I let out a loud 'Yaaaaaah!' and suplayed, but he was so big and I didn't get up enough speed that he landed on top of me. That 'yaaah' turned into a 'uhhhhh' and I squirted out from under him like a bar of soap. The crowd went wild laughing."

Libal said he learned the salto from former Nebraska and Chicago Bears football player Bob Pickens who finished fourth in wrestling during the 1964 Olympics and the whizzer from Japanese national champion Yasu Katsumara.

His biggest disappointment? That would have to be the time he earned a berth on the United States world wrestling team and the right to go to the championships held that year in South America but wasn't taken.

"They (the officials) didn't take me because they didn't think I was experienced enough in Greco-Roman so they took someone else," he explains. "I probably wasn't then, but out there (during the Great Plains) I didn't wrestle freestyle, I wrestled Greco. Every hold I used was a Greco hold."

OSU Coach 'Delighted'

Stillwater, Okla. (UPI)—Jim Stanley, Oklahoma State University football defensive coordinator, said Sunday he was "delighted" to be named new head coach to replace outgoing Dave Smith.

"I'm delighted to be the head coach at Oklahoma State," Stanley said upon accepting the offer of the Board of Regents. "I was hopeful this would come about when Dave (Smith) took the job at SMU."

It took the regents seven and a half hours to decide to offer the 38-year-old Stanley a four-year, $25,000 contract. But when they finally made their decision Saturday night, it was unanimous.

Before walking to the athletic dormitory to inform his players of his new job, Stanley reported he was "very happy" with the terms of the contract.

Athletic Director Floyd Gass and former coach Smith had recommended Stanley to the regents.

Stanley said he would talk to his assistant coaches and was "hopeful we can keep most of them."

Stanley is in his second stint at OSU, having spent six years on Phil Cutchin's staff from 1963-68. He was defensive coordinator at Navy for two seasons before becoming defensive coach at Winnipeg of the Canadian Football League.

He joined the Cowboy staff March 27 as assistant head coach.

The Pokes finished their first winning season in a decade this year, were third in the Big Eight behind Oklahoma and Nebraska and upset three bowlbound teams—Missouri, Colorado and Iowa State.

Omaha — A potential nationally ranked team with an all-American center.

That's what Creighton will face here Monday night at Civic Auditorium in Santa Clara and 6-10 Mike Stewart. The Broncos beat the Utah Classic the past weekend by downing No. 14 Providence, 97-92.

Santa Clara beat Utah, 80-76, Friday night to earn the right to play the nationally rated Friars Saturday night for the tournament's title.

The California team is led by Stewart, who was a Helms Foundation all-American pick last year as a junior. The touted center was drafted by the NBA and ABA, but passed up both offers to finish college.

Stewart averaged 21.2 points and 9.7 rebounds a game last year.

The Broncos' front line is considered one of the best in the nation. Joining Stewart will be 6-7 Fred Lavaroni and 6-5

Penn State Ready To Resume Drills For Sugar Bowl

University Park, Pa. (UPI) — Penn State's football team resumes practice Monday for its Sugar Bowl date with Oklahoma.

Coach Joe Paterno held two brief workouts last week and then sent his squad home for a break. The Nittany Lions will practice here five days and take another break for Christmas.

The entire squad will depart for New Orleans Dec. 26. "This has been a great group to work with," Paterno said.

"They have worked hard to get better all season and they have improved. It has been fun to coach this team."

Once again, Paterno put off all comments about his rumored move to the professional New England Patriots until after the Sugar Bowl.

Penn State dropped its opener, 28-21, to Tennessee and then won 10 games in a row. Oklahoma also has a 10-1 mark.

Tough enough to be called Chevrolet.
When LUV came to this country, it brought something very special with it. The Chevrolet name. It appears on the tailgate of every LUV pickup. The import truck tough enough to be called Chevrolet.

Missouri Should Move Up In Ratings

By BILL MADDEN
UPI Sports Writer

Missourians have long maintained a "show me" attitude for just about everything and quite likely some of that spirit has rubbed off on the state's high-flying college basketball team.

For in a conference (Big Eight) not noted in recent years for its cage prowess, the unbeaten and 10th ranked University of Missouri is showing the nation it's for real. Latest to bear witness to that fact was the University of Tennessee, which fell victim to the Tigers and super scorer John Brown in the finals of their own Volunteer Classic Saturday night.

Brown led Missouri with 23 points in its 67-57 win over favored Tennessee on the Vols' home court and that combined with a 68-55 win over Holy Cross the night before, gave the Tigers a 7-0 mark and a sure ticket to move up in the ratings this week.

Already in favor for coach

Norm Stewart's surprising Missourians are the detours some of the other top 10 teams encountered over the weekend.

Oh yes, UCLA, even without coach John Wooden who is hospitalized with a mild heart condition, meted out a 49-30 straight victory but No. 2 Florida State and No. 9 North Carolina felt the first sting of defeat while No. 5 Minnesota had its problems.

The top-rated Bruins, playing without Wooden on the bench for the first time ever, pounded out-manned Santa Barbara 98-67 behind a 30-point, 22 rebound performance of 6-11 Bill Walton. It is still not known how long Wooden will be away from his team, but in his absence, assistant Gary Cunningham will have the rather pleasant task of "pushing the buttons" for the Bruins.

In the pre-holiday tournament action involving head-to-head competition of top 10 teams, North Carolina State won the first of many showdowns this season with its cross-state neighbor North Carolina. The 6th-rated Wake Forest 88-83 on Friday, knocked North Carolina from the unbeaten ranks 68-61 on Saturday to wrap up the Big Four title for '72.

Joining the Tar Heels in defeat was Florida State which was stunned 61-59 by Princeton in the first round of the Marshall Classic and then came back to whip Baylor 85-67 in the consolation Saturday. Marshall later disposed of Princeton, 78-64, to win its own tourney.

No. 3 Marquette had little trouble with Xavier, winning 70-52 behind a combined 38 points from soph Maurice Lucas and junior Larry McNeill, but fifth-ranked Minnesota had some problems with Loyola of Chicago. The Gophers blew a 16-point lead and had to come back in the last two minutes to pull out an 87-81 triumph over the Chicagoans.

Other weekend upsets saw No. 15 Providence (which had beaten No. 15 South Carolina the night before) lose 97-92 to unranked Santa Clara in the finals of the Utah Classic, Kansas too No. 18 San Francisco in the Jayhawk Classic and No. 17 Oral Roberts fall to unranked Nevada-Las Vegas 86-80 Friday night.

Elsewhere on Saturday No. 8 Southwestern Louisiana defeated McNeese State 89-67. No. 12 Indiana belted Ohio 89-68. No. 13 South Carolina topped Utah 77-73. No. 15 Houston edged California 79-75. Southern California beat Purdue 79-71 in the Trojan Classic and Kentucky coasted past Oregon 95-68 in its own U.K. Invitational.

Mercedes-Benz announces precisely the kind of model change you expect from Mercedes-Benz.

MODEL CHANGES at Mercedes-Benz are inspired not by the trends of fashion but by the thrust of engineering progress. One such change becomes official today: the Mercedes-Benz 250 Sedan has evolved into the 280 Sedan—without stretching the body one inch or stooping to the slightest hint of styling trickery.

The technical improvements that inspired this change will set the 280 further apart than ever from other cars in its class.

Should you invest your $8,875* in the 280 Sedan? Study its engineering refinements. Weigh all the facts. Measure this car's performance against your needs—then decide.

Remarkable new engine
The engineers hid the 280's biggest news under the hood.

Fresh from a long laboratory incubation is a new 2.8-liter double-overhead-camshaft engine. Hemispherical combustion chambers, 2-stage dual compound carburetor—this lovingly assembled Six could be mistaken for a high-performance sports car engine. (Note that it revs up to 6500 rpm.)

"The crankshaft is something of a masterpiece," reports Britain's Autocar magazine, "running in seven main bearings, and every one of the twelve webs incorporating a counterweight." The goal: low engine vibration.

The men who designed this engine aimed for efficiency instead of brute power. You get the running smoothness you expect from a car of this class. Something you may not expect from a car of this class: the 280 engine's restrained appetite for gasoline.

As agile as before
That engine can be lighter and less bulky than those used in other $8000 sedans because the 280 Sedan itself is lighter and less bulky.

It is an engineering fact that the top 3 domestic "luxury" sedans all weigh at least half a ton more, and measure a full 3 feet longer, than the 280 Sedan. Scant wonder that they take those huge 1.8 engines.

Yet the extra bulk of these larger cars seems more a matter of show than extra roominess: the 280 matches them for interior space—and actually exceeds them in trunk capacity.

Those $8000 "luxury" sedans are impressive standing in a driveway. But compare driving them with driving the 280 Sedan, out in the real world.

You'll discover that the 280 twirls through a turning circle of only 36.4 feet (about the same as a little VW 1200 "Beetle"). Those larger cars don't.

The 280 nips into parking spots those heavier sedans have to pass up.

And you'll slip through holes in city traffic where dreamboats dare not go.

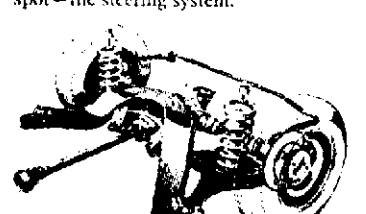

Fully independent suspension
Let others brag about how big and ornate their cars are. You can brag about how well your 280 Sedan handles.

"...the most controllable high speed sedan we've tested."

That was Motor Trend magazine's reaction to the 250 Sedan; and the 280's handling is unchanged.

This is because its superb suspension is unchanged: a four-wheel, fully independent system with a diagonal-pivot rear swing axle. Gas-pressurized shock absorbers and anti-sway bars front and rear are standard components. Also standard: 175 SR14 radial-ply tires on wheel rims 5 1/2 inches wide.

The engineers fitted an additional shock absorber to the 280, in an unusual spot—the steering system.

4-speed automatic shift
Your 280's automatic transmission is so quick-shifting that even sporting drivers have expressed surprise—and approval. You can set it in DRIVE and leave it there; you can also shift through the forward gears by hand.

The padded shift lever sits within easy reach on a central console. (If you prefer, a column shift lever can be fitted at no extra cost.)

You are not charged extra for this automatic transmission, or for power steering and power brakes, or for an electrically heated rear window. They are all part of the 280's base price.

Even air conditioning falls under the heading of standard equipment. You'll count four separate outlets on the instrument panel—two for the driver, two for his front-seat passenger.

Comfort not forgotten
The painstaking Mercedes-Benz engineers found one subtle way after another

Mercedes-Benz motor cars: from $15,094* to $36,345*
Mercedes-Benz offers a vast range of models. Here are suggested retail prices for 7 of the most popular types:

400SE 4-door	$36,345
400SE 4-door Roadster	$31,694
280SE 4-door	$21,154
280SE 2-door	$19,918
280SE 2-door	$18,726
280SE 2-door	$18,726
280SE 2-door	$18,726

to make the 280 an eminently livable machine.

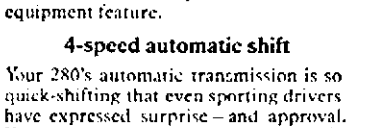

You sit high enough to see the road ahead. Large glass areas enhance visibility. Your body is supported firmly in seats built around a network of coil springs, not cheap foam rubber.

You needn't fumble around to find the headlight dimmer switch or windshield wiper and washer controls. They're a fingertip away in a pod on the left of the steering column; you can work them without taking a hand off the wheel.

More than status
The new 280 Sedan is plainly not $8,875* worth of bigness, or styling, or status. Buy it and you buck the trends of the "luxury" class head-on.

Your satisfying reward: ownership of a precision machine engineered to outlive trends. One test drive will confirm your wisdom in choosing it.

Arrange with your authorized Mercedes-Benz dealer to take that test drive soon. For more useful facts about the 280 and other models, clip the coupon and mail it today. You will receive a free color brochure.

Standard Tricycles Labeled Unsafe By Research Study

Washington (UPI) — Standard tricycles are unstable and unsafe for children because poor design lets them roll over and pitch backwards under normal use, according to an engineering research study made for the government.

As a result of the study, the Health, Education and Welfare Department's Bureau of Product Safety has started drafting mandatory design and performance regulations for tricycle makers, agency officials told UPI.

With between 100,000 and 150,000 tricycle-related injuries a year, HEW asked Calspan Corp. of Buffalo, N.Y., formerly the Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory Inc., to study tricycles. Calspan's automotive studies have been cited by Ralph Nader in his auto safety campaign.

A preliminary copy of Calspan's study was made available on request.

Calspan said "unstable performance, particularly rollover while turning" can occur within the normal operating range of many tricycles.

"Essentially what they said was that tricycles have an unsafe design configuration," said Walter Johnson, director of the HEW bureau's division of children's hazards.

Agency officials said most stable tricycles examined by Calspan for children aged 6 and under was a low slung unit that one manufacturer calls a "Big Wheel" because of its over-large front wheel

EVANS WALKS IN SPACE

Apollo 17 astronaut Ronald E. Evans clings to hand-hold, top, as he makes his way to bay in service module, center, containing three film canisters. Bottom, he returns with one of the film canisters which he put in the command ship, America. Evans made the spacewalk about 180,000 miles from earth Sunday as the Apollo spacecraft sped home.

No Real Hazard Posed By Missing Scissors

Space Center, Houston (AP) — Scissors lost somewhere in the cabin of Apollo 17 command ship America pose no serious hazard to the astronauts, space officials said Sunday.

Some officials expressed concern earlier that the scissors could possibly stab one of the astronauts if the instrument was thrown about inside the spacecraft when the astronauts splash down in the South Pacific on Tuesday.

The scissors were described then as sharp-pointed and of surgical quality.

Officials on Sunday, however, said the scissors are actually blunt-pointed and could only bruise a spaceman if he were hit by them during splashdown.

"These are bruisers, not stabbers," said a spokesman.

A flight controller Neil Hutchinson said engineers are putting together a plan for the

Quiet Man Kills Wife, 2 Children

Brussels, Belgium (AP) — A man killed his wife, two children and a passerby after a family quarrel and then committed suicide, police reported Sunday.

A third child was in serious condition in a hospital and a second onlooker was injured. A fourth child escaped uninjured.

When police broke into the house in downtown Brussels, the man turned his 22 caliber rifle on himself.

Deputy Prosecutor George Reniers said Clement de Roover, 38, a doorman, had gone out with his wife, Raymonde, 37, daughter Nicole, 14, and son Pierre, 19, to celebrate the mother's birthday.

Daughters Patricia, 16, and Marianne, 15, had stayed home, watching television.

Reniers said the family toured several cafes and returned home to watch the end of a TV film. Then all went to bed. There was an argument between the parents and De Roover tried to strangle his wife, he said.

Daughter Patricia tried to separate them, Reniers added, but De Roover took his gun and shot his wife, and then his daughter Nicole.

The three other children fled down the staircase.

The father shot and killed Marianne, who had reached the first landing, and from the window hit Patricia in the chest, killed a passerby who was trying to help her, and wounded another.

Only the youngest child, Pierre, escaped.

Reniers said De Roover was a quiet man who loved firearms. His home was full of collection guns.

"This proves once more the danger of free sales of 22 long rifles," Reniers said. "A family quarrel can happen so often. But with dangerous weapons at hand, it can lead easily to a bloodbath."

The 22 long rifles are the only shooting weapons sold without police authorization in Belgium.

The two surviving children said they did not know why their parents had an argument.

They said the quarrel had started when the family was out. The parents had quieted down, however, when they came back home to watch the end of a Western movie — "Rio Bravo" with John Wayne.

R. Thomas Elected President Of Havelock Business Group

Roger Thomas was elected president of the Havelock Business Association Sunday evening, when the group elected and installed new officers and directors for 1973.

Other new officers named at the annual meeting include Richard Harner, vice president, and Niles Jobst, secretary-treasurer.

New members of the board of directors are John Schwindt, Virgil Jacobsen and Jess Buettgenbach. Mrs. Vicki Rokeby was appointed to fill an unexpired board term. Jim Studnicka, outgoing president, will take over as board chairman.

In his final address to more than 200 association members and guests, Studnicka noted the group's accomplishments during 1972, pointing out that "achievements in the field of community relations are the high point of the year's activities."

He mentioned co-sponsorship of the State Triple-A Softball Tournament, the proceeds of which were returned to the Lincoln Parks and Recreation Dept. to provide new lights for Ballard Field; Halloween window painting for students, and the Havelock Christmas Parade which put Santa back on a traditional sleigh and drew an estimated total of 5,000 persons.

Studnicka also noted sponsorship of a work-study program for college students through the Havelock Methodist Church, and cooperation with the Lincoln Information Service for the Elderly in promoting the school lunch program for senior citizens.

Police Question 4 Israelis About Arab Espionage

Tel Aviv (AP) — Four Israelis were under police interrogation Sunday on suspicion of working with an Arab sabotage ring.

At least two of the four had visited Syria for training, police said. All four were said to be leftists.

Iser Harel, who for 15 years was the chief of Israel's combined intelligence operations, confirmed it was the first time Israeli Jews had cooperated with an Arab country for ideal goals reasons.

Japan Closes Taipei Embassy

Taipei (AP) — The Japanese embassy in Taipei and its consulate-general in Taiwan's southern city of Kachung have been closed, a Japanese official said Sunday.

He said the missions were closed Friday after instructions were received from the Japanese foreign ministry in Tokyo.

The closure of the Japanese embassy also means the termination of the Nationalist Chinese embassy's functions in Tokyo, he said. Japan and Nationalist China severed their diplomatic ties on Sept. 21, when Japan and Communist China established diplomatic relations.

The Nationalists and Japanese will continue to maintain relations through organizations which will be permitted to grant visas and handle other matters once performed by the embassies.

POGO

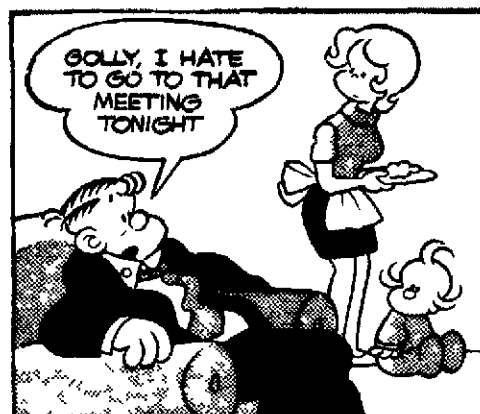

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
